F.W.I.C. Has Remarkable Year Of Achievement

The following is the second part of the account of the work accomplished by the Federated Women's Institutes in 1958. It is presented by Mrs. George Wilson, FWIC, Public Relations Officer.

Books were presented to the public—Nova Scotia's volume of "A Canadian Mosiac", compiled by Mrs. W.A. Turner, Kentville, N.S., tells a fascinating story of the history of their crafts; 'Adventures in Cooking", compiled by Mrs. J.O. Decker, Pemberton, B.C. provincial president, and her able committee, combines recipes and history; "A Delegate Reports" (A World Tour in 75 Days), by Mrs. George Wilson, St. Marys, Ont., gives you the story of the Ceylon ACWW conference and world tour.

Other cultural projects have not been over-looked. Mrs. R. Partington, Francois Lake, B.C. cultural activities convener, is the proud custodian of the national quilt, which is truly a work of art. Tweedsmuir contests have been arranged and a citizenship trophy offered by Senator Cairine Wilson for the best essay on that topic. This is in charge of Mrs. George Bennett, Simmie, Sask, former Citizenship Convener.

In addition to these, study projects have been instigated — the Integration of First and New Canadians was selected by the national executive; preliminary study for the proposed Canadian conference on children was entrusted to Mrs. G. MacPhatter, Owen Sound, Ont., convener of Home Economics and Social Welfare and Mrs. John MacLean, Eureka, N.S., Convener of Citizenship.

The appointment of Mrs. E.J. Roylance of Greenwood, B. C., vice-president of FWIC, as postmaster of the town and inspector of that postal area was an announcement of interest in 1958.

Vice-president Mrs. T.C. Howes Millet, Alta., represented the organization at the Highway Safety Conference in Edmonton and Mrs P.Y. McCandless, Waterdown, Ont., its annual meeting in Toronto; Mrs. John MacLean, citizenship convener, attended the conference on education in Ottawa; Mrs. G. MacPhatter a meeting of the National Committee of this Conference, Toronto; and Mrs. Keith Rand, Port Williams, N.S. covered the 4-H Clubs Conference in Winnipeg, the CAC Annual Meeting in Montreal, and in her capacity as national president, attended many provincial conventions.

The Peace Garden Plot in the International Peace Garden continues to be beautified under the direction of Mrs. G.C. Catley, Sandford, Man., and also the Manitoba Women's Institutes.

It is thrilling to read of the exchange border visits between the rural women of U.S.A. and Canada. The Peace Garden and these journeys of friendship, together with our miles of undefended border, are an example to all the world (I was privileged to attend one of these international visits last year at Essex, Ontario.)

These are the highlights of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada in the interests of "HOME AND COUNTRY" in 1958.

MINIATURE MODES

CLOTHES for little lassies have acquired fashion without losing one iota of their fressness and appeal. Celeste, a pioneer in couture fashions for little girls, comes through each season with her idea of an heirloom dress. This one, done in springtime perfection, is a pale blue cloud of silk organza over a matching, separate, cotton satin underdress. Exquisite embroidery and lace edge the bertha collar, while the bodice is meticulously tucked from bertha to waist. The dress is just as pretty in rosebud pink

ELLEN'S DIARY

With Hopes Running High They Cultivate And Sow

"Yes, James offered "even though times do tend to discourage the farmer—and I'm afraid this Spring will see more of them leave the farming, still farm-folks have many a blessing. "...About the chores then, he had stopped a moment in the yard to look off across the fields to where the younger farmer and and Mack were gathering a load of firewood to the trailer they had drawn up beside the far heap.

"The season in itself is encouraging" he continued. "You think well, the prices are low: potatoes selling away below the cost of production, hogs are a question, beef—the farmers are not getting paid to put much bloom on them; yet if you like the land and its ways—if your heart's in the work, the cropping comes and you welcome it. The farm has always given you a living you say, and maybe this year will be good, even though "he shook his head soberly "reason at present doesn't warrant it...But again you repair the fences, ready the seed, cultivate and sow, and it's always with hopes high."

"And the labbrer does get his hire", we nodded.

"Aye, Though" he smiled, "it's not in cash returns he must reckon it! At the same time, if he likes the land, he does—because he couldn't be satisfied or content away from it. Any other work to him would only be considered in the light of a job and there's little satisfaction in that".

The afterlight was rosy then. It dimpled the white - patched Spring fields with pools of brightness in the last glory of the day. On the hilltops westward, the tips and arcs of the woodland trees were outlined dark and pretty against the after-sunset glow. Peace was spreading wide quiet wings over heights and depths of our valley.

"Yes" James said eyes on the tractor—trailer now turning home ward farm folks have many a blessing. . . We've had a good winter. And now there's the Spring with its promise."

So many blessings indeed. Today with its continuing cheerful hearth-fires, its promise of seedtime — snowdrops greening, ducks in the stream, geese on the wing, fowls into Spring-tunes ...a lambkin's wavering bleat, a calf's plaintive low.

Now, like the daisy-faces on a Summer lea, stars gleam in the wide meadows of night, and along the hours the moon will shine to light the path of any wanderer home. Shall we not waken to its light stealing into the dim of our bedroom? And we shall love its brightness there in the serenity of this old house before on our pillow beside James in the quaint old wooden bed of his "ancestors" we shall go again to walk the lovely paths of our dreams.

Until tomorrow — — — Diary. Good-night.
