

What is Wanted.

Not long prayers, but ardent zeal,—
This is what is wanted more;
To put the shoulder to the wheel,
And bread into the hungry deal
From the store.

Not high-sounding notes of praise
Ringing through the vaulted dome,
But that we fallen raise,
Bring the poor from Life's highways
To the home.

Worship God by doing good;
Help the suffering in their needs,
He who loves God as he should
Make his heart's love understood
By his deeds.

How Mendelssohn Made Music.

Mendelssohn delighted in the open air and beautiful scenery. When he was twenty, he stayed for some time at Chester, when he was entertained by a Mr. Taylor. He loved afterward to tell of the charm which the meadow and brook, the trees and grass had for him there. He spent much time in sketching and painting; but his head was full of music, and everything suggested a musical idea to him. He was very fond of carnations, and he set a bunch of them to music in the album of a daughter of his host, with a drawing of the flowers over the notes; not forgetting to set some delicate arpeggios in the music for the scent of the flowers. On seeing the younger sister with some bell-shaped flowers in her hair, he said that the fairies might dance on the trumpets, and he set them to a capriccio. He never tired of merrymaking. And one afternoon toward dusk, he, with a number of young people, was one of a happy young company that was picnicking in a thicket. Some one gayly proposed a fire; and all began to drag the boughs and twigs into place, so that soon they had a fine bonfire. While still lingering around it, Mendelssohn began to ask for some music, but nothing could be found save a worn-out fiddle of Gardeners'. Mendelssohn, all undismayed, began to play, shouting with laughter at his performance; but soon there was a hush in the chat and sport, and the whole party sat spell-bound at the lovely music which he drew from even that despised fiddle. He would sit for hours, improvising dance-tunes, and liked nothing better than to entertain his friends with his music. He always looked back on his visit to Chester as one of the brightest spots in his bright life.—Agatha Tunis, in "From Bach to Wagner," St. Nicholas for October.

Electroplating a Corpse

A chemist of Brest has resurrected an old idea about the disposal of the dead. He merely rubs the corpse with plum bago, suspends it in an electric copper bath, and lo! a fine coating of copper is deposited all over it. The corpse, it is said, being thus wholly shut off from air, will be thoroughly preserved and remain forever. Fruits and flowers have been preserved intact in this way. Bunches of grapes treated with the copper bath are used as decorations for the ceiling and friezework of dining rooms, and the effect is extremely artistic. Lilies have been immersed in the bath and delicately coated with dusky, shining metal.

By this method a corpse becomes converted into a copper statue. A man might electroplate his deceased mother-in-law, and have her always near him. A husband might leave it in his will that he should be thus copper-coated and set up in the family library. There, if his widow wishes to marry again, he will be on the spot as an awful warning and example. Persons who cannot afford to electroplate their dead with copper may use zinc. Poor relations may be disposed of in this way. Zinc is good enough for them.

Curious Case of Nervous Sympathy

At the last meeting of the French Academy of Medicine, Dr. Brown-Séquard related a very remarkable instance of the power of sympathy which came within his recent observation. A little girl was looking out of a window in a house in the Batignolles, a few days ago. The lower sash was raised and the child had placed her arms on the sill. Suddenly the support on which the sash rested gave way and the window fell with considerable force on the little girl's arms, inflicting a severe bruise. Her mother, who was in the room at the time, happened to look toward the window at the moment of the accident and witnessed it. She fainted with fright and remained insensible for a minute or two. When she recovered she was conscious of a severe pain in both arms, and on examining the seat of it she was amazed to find on each arm a bruise corresponding in position to that left by the accident on the child's, though more extensive.

It is announced that an English inventor has lately devised a method of coating tin with a material resembling glass, which removes all danger of poison in canned goods.

The Japanese government are introducing the use of Roman characters into their printed language, instead of the native. It will facilitate popular learning.

It is beginning to be believed that the famous red sunsets of a year ago were caused, not by volcanic dust, but by cosmic, or star dust.
