FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Work was begun Tuesday on reassembling for final burial the bones and skulls of 23 members of the famed Medici family.

Among the remains are those of Lorenzo the Magnificent; Giovanni delle Bande Nere; Alessandro, Duke of Florence; Grand Duke Cosimo I, and his wife, Eleonora of Toledo; Grand Duke Francesco I, Joan of Hapsburg.

Skulls were separated from the skeletons in 1945 and 1946 and taken to Florence's Institute of Anthropology for study to see what distinguished this family of the middle ages.

Workers began Tuesday preparing the Medici chapel in Florence's Basilica of St. Lawrence for the reassembled bones. They will be placed in zinc caskets.

Sport Echoes From Prince County

Olands four-man team beat us again, but we give them quite a run this time. The more we see of four-man competition, the more we think the four-man outfit is not at such a disadvantage as is commonly supposed. They have all the better of it on attack. The four best batters on any team coming to bat continually would be no picnic for our best pitchers. Of course, the quartet are handicapped defensively, but does it offset their batting advantage?

Why don't we try it sometime? Supposing we select a team such as Vern Cottrell, pitcher; Ted Kimber, catcher; Edgar Taylor, first base; Nell Walker, roving outfielder. (He's the roughest outfielder we know of), and put them up against the R.C.A.F. Lancers, who are not represented on an interesting experiment, and maybe we could lure a pretty good crowd to come out and watch it.

Although many baseball and softball fans probably know the reason for the "infield fly" rule, there may be some who don't, so here's the explanation. With runners on first and second, for example, and less than two out, if there were no "infield fly" rule, an infielder could intentionally drop the fly, pick it up and throw to third. Another quick throw to second would complete a double play. The "infield fly" rule, the batter out, prevents the double play-out, and thus protects the team at bat.

If there is a runner on first only, all you could get would be one force, so you might as well catch the ball unless you'd rather have the batter running bases than the man already on first who may be a speed merchant on the paths. Of course, in this case, the ball caught if he thinks it was dropped intentionally.

The rule that states that, with less than two out, and a runner on first, the batter is out even if the catcher drops the third strike also protects the team at bat. If this rule were not in the book, the catcher might drop the ball intentionally, and throw to second and first would complete a double play.

A horse-racing enthusiast called us up and enquired where he could buy a stop-watch that splits the seconds into such small pieces as the one which recorded the old Summerside Raceway track record. He was referring to a 208 43:94 which appeared in two newspapers. Actually 23:94 is what tap out the word "record" on Teletype units, and mistakenly have the figure instead of the letter control key down. A typographical error which got quite a circulation.

Visiting Rotary Governor Speaks

Mr. Fred E. McAllister of St. Stephen, N.B., Governor of Rotary District 284 was guest speaker last evening at a luncheon meeting of the Summerside Rotary Club presided over by President Ed Smith.

Mr. McAllister preceded his address by remarking on the beauty of the island at this time of year and said he had never seen it looking nicer.

He then told the Rotary gathering of some of the vocational, community and international undertakings of Rotary, stressing the close relationship of Canadian and American Rotary groups. Mr. McAllister also told of his inspirational visit to the school for incoming governors held at Lake Placid, New York, attended by members from 45 nations and all 48 states of the United States.

He also reviewed events at the Rotary Golden Jubilee conference held in Chicago several weeks ago.

The guest speaker who was making his annual visit, was thanked by President Ed Smith who in turn received a moment of the occasion, on behalf of the club, in the form of a paper of weight with Rotary's 4-way test inscribed thereon.

Guests at the luncheon were Mr. Elmer Murphy, Summerside; Mr. Jim Norton, Moncton and Mr. Lerle Gibson, St. Stephen.—S

Midgets Win

MacDonald's bopper back of third base brought Rusty Wilson across the plate in the last half of the ninth inning at the Airport diamond last evening, and the Daks defeated the Capitol Stars in a thrilling finish by the score of 19-18.

The Airforce Girls went ahead 11-2 in the first inning, and the Stars kept nibbling at their lead until in the first half of the ninth inning Kay Murphy hit a home run and chased Lorinda Gaudet across the plate ahead of her to knot the count at 18-all. Then Marie Peters was put in to pitch for Capitol Stars, but two walks, a hit and a fielder's choice proved her undoing.

Both sides had thirteen hits. "Johnny" Johnson went the route for the Daks, while the Capitol Stars used three pitchers, Lorinda Gaudet, Priscilla Gillis and Marie Peters, the last named taking the loss.

Lungbut, a newcomer to the Daks, led the team in hitting, getting four hits, including a double and triple in six tries. Hladynski hit two for five. For the Stars Alice Gallant was the big gun with four singles in six attempts. "Tig" Arsenault and Kay Murphy had two for four. The game was a loosely played affair, the Daks having nine boots and the Stars seven.

President Sees Evidence Of New World Friendliness

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

President Eisenhower flew home to Washington from the Big Four conference Sunday and told a welcoming crowd "there is evidence of a new friendliness in the world."

"Just what will be the result of this conference, of course, no one knows," the president said, "but the coming months will tell much."

But in the meantime," he added, "we do know that new contacts have been established and there is evidence of a new friendliness in the world."

The president will give a report on the Geneva summit meeting to congressional leaders of both parties at a White House session today.

Then at 1:30 p.m. A.D.T. tonight he will report to the nation in an extemporaneous 15-minute address over all major radio and television networks.

State Secretary Dulles returned on another plane Sunday with a declaration that the United States achieved all its limited objectives at the Big Four conference "and perhaps a little more."

Prime Minister Eden, returning to London from the conference, said: "I feel more confident about the international scene than I did when I left."

"There were plenty of problems and difficulties," he told reporters at London airport, "but at least we are heading the right way, which is something we could not be sure about some while back."

Eden added that he thought the leaders of the Big Four powers were wise not to try to get down to too much detail in their six days of meetings.

He said the Big Four tried to achieve three things in Geneva: 1. To agree on the nature of the problems we have to solve. 2. To chart the course. 3. To try in private discussion to reduce the sense of mistrust. "I think it is true to say we have succeeded in all three more than I expected."

Eden will make a full report on the conference to the House of Commons Tuesday or Wednesday. There is expected to be a full parliamentary discussion.

Foreign Secretary Harold Maclean exuberantly told newspapermen: "There ain't gonna be no war." He added: "The very fact that the problems of the world have got to be solved by peaceful means and by acceptance of the new conditions of these times."

Prime Minister Edgar Faure, on his return here to Paris, said he brought back the word "no war" as a favorable impression.

"Clearly, not all problems have been settled," Faure said, "but already an atmosphere, a climate has been created. We have succeeded in drawing up common resolutions, and directives intended to fix the work of the foreign ministers. . . we have embarked on a road which is long and difficult, but I believe firmly it is the right one."

Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Soviet party boss Nikita Khrushchev stopped off in East Berlin on their way home.

Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl of East Germany thanked them for accepting an invitation "to spend several days" in East Berlin. In response, Bulganin declared: 1. The Geneva conference succeeded in relaxing world tension. 2. The Russians are dedicated to reunified Germany in the German national interest and in the interest of European security. He reiterated that any negotiations on German unity must include the Communist eastern regime as well as the Bon republic as active participants.

Khrushchev departed from Geneva the same way he came—talking incessantly and smiling and pushing people out of his way. Khrushchev's very last gesture was to push Bulganin aside and shoulder his way into Soviet airplane number 001, leaving the surprised Russian premier to bring up the rear.

Special Course For Canadian Air Cadets

OTTAWA (CP)—More than 5,500 Canadian boys will spend at least part of their summer holidays in close-up study of what makes airplanes fly.

They are 14- to 18-year-old members of Canada's Air Cadet League. Most will attend two-week courses at special camps at Air Force training centres. Some will learn to fly at four-week sessions at civilian flying clubs. A few will visit other countries as exchange cadets.

Formed in 1941 as a pool for pre-trained RCAF recruits, the league now graduates about 5,000 boys a year. Official estimate that 1,000 of them—one in five—join the RCAF.

275 SQUADRONS

There now are 275 air cadet squadrons in Canada's 10 provinces and membership totals more than 19,000.

The Air Force foots the bill for their training, equipment and uniforms while the league, a voluntary organization, promotes community interest and raises funds to support existing squadrons and help form new ones.

Boys usually join the air cadets at age 14. They wear uniforms similar to those of air force personnel.

During the school months, squadrons meet two nights a week for training and study of navigation, meteorology, radar, signals and aero-engine. They also take part in community welfare projects and hold social events of their own.

Most of their instructors are ex-RCAF personnel or graduate air cadets.

SUMMER CAMP

Every summer some 5,000 cadets spend two weeks in camps at RCAF stations at Greenwood, N.S., Clinton, Ont., and Abbotsford, B.C. There they continue their studies, participate in sports and fly as passengers in service aircraft.

A senior group of 17 and 18-year-olds—usually one from each squadron—learns to fly each summer through a scholarship plan started in 1946. Four-week training sessions are held at 33 flying clubs across the country and at the end successful cadets qualify for private pilots' certificates.

Tuition for 250 of these older cadets is paid by the Air Force. The league pays their travelling expenses and board, and this year raised tuition fees for an additional 50 students. The 1955 courses are expected to bring to 2,800 the total who have learned to fly under RCAF or commercial aircrew.

There is also a seven-week leaders' course at Camp Borden, Ont., RCAF station, which annually graduates 100 potential instructors and officers.

NEW COURSE

And this summer a new drill instructors' course will be held at Abbotsford, B.C. It will train 100 cadets including those selected for a drill competition with United States air cadets Aug. 27 at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto.

Exchange visits with cadets from other countries have been arranged for 59 Canadians. Partic-

Thought Drowning Youth Was Only Fooling

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., (CP)—A 17-year-old youth drowned Monday because his friends thought he was fooling when they heard him calling for help.

The youth, whose name has been withheld until his father in the Arctic is notified, jumped into the waters of nearby Octagon pond and called to his friends that "I can't swim. I can't swim. I really can't."

When they realized he was serious it was too late.

Consider Moving Coal Miners To Base Metal

OTTAWA (CP)—Possibility of moving unemployed coal miners in the Maritimes to base metal mines in other parts of Canada is being explored by the federal government.

Acting Labor Minister Martin made the announcement Monday in the commons after two CCF members, Clarie Gillis, Cape Breton South, and H. W. Herridge, Kootenay West, said jobs are available for miners at Trail, B.C., and Sudbury, Ont.

Mr. Gillis urged that some of the 800 displaced coal miners in the Glace Bay, N.S., area be sent at federal expense to the two base metal mines. The Dominion Coal Co. had announced there was little hope of employment for these men, thrown out of work when the No. 1-B colliery at Glace Bay closed June 30.

"I know that mining is mining, and a coal miner would have very little difficulty adapting himself to base metal mining because, in my judgment, it is a much easier job than coal mining," he said.

GOOD ECONOMICS

It was better economics to take this action than to bring in immigrants as farmers and let them take the mining jobs a month or two after their arrival. He hoped the government and the unemployment insurance commission would consider his suggestion.

"That now is being done," Mr. Martin replied.

Earlier, Mr. Gillis raised the question of federal aid to provincial vocational training plans. He criticized a decline this year of $100,000 in maintenance grants and a drop of $100,000 in grants for construction of vocational training schools.

Mr. Martin said vocational training aid will be discussed at next

Thought Drowning Youth Was Only Fooling

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., (CP)—A 17-year-old youth drowned Monday because his friends thought he was fooling when they heard him calling for help.

The youth, whose name has been withheld until his father in the Arctic is notified, jumped into the waters of nearby Octagon pond and called to his friends that "I can't swim. I can't swim. I really can't."

When they realized he was serious it was too late.

Tense Situation Over China's Grain Supply

TOKYO (AP)—One of Communist China's 10 vice-premier admitted Friday night "a tense situation" had developed over the country's grain supply, but denied reports of famine.

Chen Yun's address before the National Peoples Congress was rebroadcast by Peiping radio.

He claimed specifically last year's floods in the Yangtze valley had nothing to do with the problem.

"The reason was not floods grain exports, over purchase or under supply by the state," the radio stated.

"The tense situation arose from rumors and incitement created by former landlords, rich peasants and certain counter-revolutionaries who took advantage of the small proprietors' sentiments of the peasants and certain shortcomings in our work."

It was Red China's frankest statements in months over internal problems that have brought two purges and reports of unrest among army veterans.

Visited For 30 Summers

Mr. Raymond D. Willard, president of the Concord Co-operative Bank, Concord, Mass., is spending a short vacation in the province.

Mr. Willard is no stranger to the island. For the past 30 years he has been numbered among the Summer visitors. Now a guest at the Charlottetown, Mr. Willard recalls his first visit when he sojourned at the old Victoria Hotel. It was for reasons of health that he was first induced to vacation here.

A certified Public Accountant, Mr. Willard retired from active business in 1953. He has been president of the Concord Co-operative Bank continuously since its inception in 1921.

Mr. Willard has seen many changes here in the past thirty summers, but looks
