Curare Is Used Against Lockjaw

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—The remarkable combination of an ancient poison and a modern mechanical breathing machine has kept a man alive here.

Charles Norwood, 42, a miner of Lithgow, New South Wales ran a rusty nail into his foot and developed tetanus, commonly known as lockjaw.

He was immediately taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, Sydney, where he has been unconscious since Oct. 1.

CURARE INJECTIONS

Curare, a deadly poison used for centures by Indians on arrowheads has been injected into Norwool every half hour since he was admitted to hospital.

Curare causes complete muscular paralysis.

If Norwood had not had the curare, tetanus convulsions would have killed him.

He has absorbed enough poison to kill 100 people, but the mechanical breathing machine has effectively taken over the work of the paralyzed respiratory muscles.

Doctors are confident now that the tetanus will gradually pass from his system, and that he will live.

Opening lead — four of diamonds.

When is it proper to cover an honor with an honor? This ancient problem continues to plague many a defender. There is no easy answer because the infinite forms the problem may take do not lend themselves to a pat formula.

The simplest advice is to deal with each such case on its particular merits; to cover when advantageous, not to when it may be harmful. Where no benefit can result the honor is not covered.

South played a low diamond from dummy and took the queen with the ace. A spade to the queen lost to East, bringing a diamond return. West won and continued the suit.

Declarer entered dummy with the king of spades and led the jack of hearts, East covering with the king. Declarer won and romped home with nine tricks.

Two errors occurred in the play, both on the same trick. Declarer made one when he led the jack of hearts instead of the nine; East made one when he covered the jack.

South needs four heart tricks to bring in the contract. No possible advantage can be gained by the jack play which is not equally accomplished by the nine. But the play of the nine has marked advantages over the jack play. It gains whenever East has four, five or six hearts to the king. The nine assures four heart tricks in each of these cases, but the jack does not.

Why should East not cover the jack? Because there is no way to gain by doing so and, more important, because he may lose a trick by covering. In this hand he did lose a trick—and a game.

We can note what happens if East ducks the jack of hearts. Declarer plays low and the finesse wins. Declarer plays the nine of hearts and when East plays low, South finds himself compelled to overtake the nine. The king of hearts can no longer be captured and the contract is doomed.

East should reason that there is no holding his partner can have which will make the king play right. Therefore, he does not cover.

Saturday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
