FOR SALE.

RARE CHANCE

The property occupied by J. J. Gay and son situated in the village of Pownal, 7 miles from Charlottetown, is offered for sale. The proprietors have carried on a large market garden nursery, and seed business for thirty years, and the purchaser will no doubt retain a large share of the local trade. The premises comprise a large dwelling house, store, warehouse, barn, shed, orchard, and about 15 acres of the most fertile land on the island. This land has been manured year after year, for so long that as an old man said the other day: "It is all a bed of manure and could be hauled for top dressing." This would be an ideal spot for a country merchant or it would be admirable for a summer resort. The situation is one of the most beautiful on the island. Good bathing, fishing, boating, shooting and within easy distance churches, post office school telephone and shops all at the door. For terms and further particulars, apply to Von Clure Gay, J. J. Gay & son or to JOHN T. MCKELISH, Solicitor, Charlottetown.

FIGHT WITH EAGLES.

A PAINTER'S EXPERIENCE ON THE FACE OF A PRECIPICE.

An Artist Undertakes a Ticklish Job In the Adirondacks - Bald Eagles Seriously Objected to the Placing of a Medicine Advertisement on the Front of Their Home.

Frank L. Van Ness, who is now a portrait painter in this city, once had an unusual experience. Mr. Van Ness says he is not likely to forget the first and only sign he ever painted, for it was while putting a patent medicine advertisement on the face of a precipice in the Adirondack mountains that he made a too intimate acquaintance with a colony of American eagles.

"My adventure in the Adirondacks occurred several years ago," said Mr. Van Ness, "but I remember it just as well as if it were only yesterday. I had gone to Keene Center, a little town in the mountains of western New York, with a friend to do some sketching from nature. Some of the mountain scenery there is very fine, and we wanted to take advantage of it during the warm vacation months. There was then no railroad at Keene Center, but a stagecoach line ran from the town to Westport on the banks of Lake Champlain, about 30 miles away. So we had an ideal location. One day there came to the little hotel where we were stopping the agent of a well known patent medicine company. He was accompanied by two sign painters and we were informed that these two men were going to paint a sign on the face of a precipice about 900 feet high, which was located about half way between Keene Center and Westport. The precipice was high in the mountains and in plain view of the stagecoach line, which wound around lower down and almost two miles away.

"The medicine people were sharp enough to know that if they could have a sign painted on that stone wall in letters large enough to be read from stagecoaches passing by it would be a great card for them. So two painters were brought out to do the job. The agent took them to the precipice. They took one glance down the 840 feet of perpendicular rock and absolutely refused to go down the face of the mountain to paint the advertisement. The medicine man came back to the hotel bearing the men and wishing he could find somebody who would tackle the job. I told him I would do it if he could make sufficient inducement.

"The agent offered me $300, and we each posted a forfeit of $50. The two painters who declined to make the descent agreed to handle the ropes in letting me down, and as soon as I was ready we made our way to the precipice. I looked over the edge, and I'll acknowledge the prospect looked pretty scary. About 200 or 300 feet down there were projecting ledges, and here and there on the ledges bald eagles had their nests. And they were good big eagles too - none of your owl size.

"The men tied strong ropes to the spruce trees growing at the top of the precipice, and the other ends of the ropes were tied to a big basket, into which I climbed with my bucket of paint. Then they dropped the basket over the cliff and let me slowly down until I was about 125 feet from the top, which I had calculated was about the point where I wanted to begin painting. I hadn't calculated on having much trouble with the eagles, but to be on the safe side I had taken a club and a revolver with me in the basket. Well, the first day I tell you those bald old fellows made it mighty hot for me. My basket hadn't any more than stopped in its descent when the birds set up a terrible racket far down below me. They screeched and screamed as if they were holding a terrible indignation meeting. I watched them for a minute or two, but as they didn't appear to be figuring on committing assault and battery I dipped the big whitewash brush I was using into the paint and started to work. A minute or two later I thought I heard a swish in the air, and looking up I saw a big eagle that looked about the size of an ostrich swooping down on me. He was so close that I didn't have time to grab either my club or revolver. I made a pass at him with my big brush as he came down. I hit him a kind of a glancing lick, and I think I got a little paint in his eye or in his mouth, for he sat down on a ledge for a minute and made queer motions with his head as if he were trying ing to get the paint out of his eye or mouth.

"Then another eagle came to his assistance, and the two began gyrating around in my neighborhood in a manner that I didn't like. I dropped my paint brush and went to hunting, so to speak. I shot at them a time or two, but didn't seem to do much damage. Again one of them flew above me, and, folding his wings to his sides, came down with a swoop. If he intended to hit me squarely his aim wasn't any better than mine. I shot at him and missed, and he opened a wing that knocked my hat off as he shot past me. Then the other one came at me with a scream of rage. But, as good luck would have it, I blazed away with my revolver and hit him, and he flew back wounded to the family below. None of the eagles came very close after that, but I kept up an intermittent firing to let them know that I proposed to hold the fort. It was the time of year when the young eagles were in the nests, and the old ones probably feared that I had come to rob them. They either learned that my mission was peaceable or else I scared them out, for they did not bother me at all after the first day.

"Even without further molestation from the eagles I had a pretty big job on my hands. The men had to pull me up and down quite a distance, for I made the sign letters 22 feet high. Each letter, as a whole, was 12 feet wide and the lines of the letters 3 1/2 in width. By ropes anchored far away from the point from which the basket was suspended the men pulled me in the direction I had to travel along the face of the precipice to continue the painting. The rock on which I was painting was a dark gray, so I painted the sign pure white, and it took three half barrels of paint to finish the job. It took me 20 days to complete my undertaking. The sign could easily be read from the stage road, but the letters appeared from there to be only an inch and a half in height. The period at the end of the advertisement I made as big as the head of a large barrel, but from the road it looked about the size of the head of a match. Passengers on the stagecoaches would frequently bet on the height of the letters, but few ever guessed them anywhere near their actual height. That was my first, last and only sign." - Chicago Chronicle.
