CHAPTER XX.

"Alas, my sister!" said Brenda, "it is now that I must in earnest begin to believe the force of spells and charms. You remember the Spanish story which you took from me long since, because I said, in your admiration of the chivalry of the olden times of Scandinavia, you rivalled the extravagance of the hero. Ah! Minna! your color shows that your conscience checks you, and reminds you of the book I mean;—is it more wise, think you, to mistake a windmill for a giant, or the commander of a paltry corsair for Kiempe, or a Viking!"

Minna did indeed color with anger at this insinuation, of which, perhaps, she felt in some degree the truth.
"You have the right," she said, "to insult me because you are possessed of my secret." Brenda's soft heart could not resist this charge of unkindness, she adjured her sister to pardon her, and the natural gentleness of Minna's feelings could not resist her entreaties.

"We are unhappy," she said, as she dried her sister's tears, "that we cannot see with the same eyes—let us not make each other more so by mutual insult and unkindness.
You have my secret. It will not, perhaps, long be one, for my father shall have the confidence to which he is entitled, so soon as certain circumstances will permit me to offer it.
Meantime, I repeat, you have my secret, and I more than suspect that I have yours in exchange, though you refuse to own it."

"How, Minna," said Brenda, "would you have me acknowledge for any such feelings as you allude to, ere he has said the least word that could justify such a confession?"
"Surely not; but a hidden fire may be distinguished by heat as well as flame."
"You understand these signs, Minna," said Brenda, hanging down her head, and in vain endeavoring to suppress the temptation to repartee which her sister's remark offered; "but I can only say, that, if ever I love at all, it shall not be until I have been asked to do so once or twice at least, which has not yet chanced to me. But no let us renew our quarrel, and rather let us think why Norna should have told us that horrible tale, and to what she expects it should lead."

"It must have been as a caution," replied Minna—"a caution which our situation, and, I will not deny it, which mine in particular, might seem to her to call for;—but I am alike strong in my own innocence, and in the honor of Cleveland."

Brenda would fain have replied, that she did not confide so absolutely in the latter security as in the first;—but she was prudent; and, forbearing to awake the former painful discussion, only replied, "It is strange that Norna should have said nothing more of her lover. Surely he could not desert her in the extremity of misery to which he had reduced her?"

"There may be agonies of distress," said Minna, after a pause, "in which the mind is so much jarred that it ceases to be responsive even to the feelings which have most engrossed it;—her sorrow for her lover may have been swallowed up in horror and despair."
"Or he may have fled from the islands, in fear of her father's vengeance," said Brenda.

"If for fear, or faintness of heart," said Minna, looking upwards, "he was capable of flying from the ruin which he had occasioned, I trust he has long ere this sustained the punishment which Heaven reserves for the most base and dastardly of traitors and of cowards.—Come, sister, we are ere this expected at the breakfast board."
And they went thither, arm in arm, with much more of confidence than had lately subsisted between them; the little quarrel which had taken place having served the purpose of a bourrasque, or sudden squall, which dispels mists and vapours, and leaves fair weather behind it.

On their way to the breakfast apartment, they agreed that it was unnecessary, and might be imprudent, to communicate to their father the circumstance of the nocturnal visit, or to let him observe that they now knew more than formerly of the melancholy history of Norna.

That Incurable Diocese.

The diocese comprising Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island is suffering for a bishop. The clergymen of this district, after mature consideration, have reached the conclusion that they are too contumacious to be ruled by any one who could be selected from among themselves. They also doubt the ability of any Canadian to keep them from insubordination. The electoral college, in excess of self-distrust, and after much discussion, voted itself incapable of so much as choosing a person from all the preachers in the world who should be capable of the task of presiding over that unruly diocese. In their distress they called upon three very high ecclesiastical dignitaries in England, asking them to search diligently for a man able and willing to undertake the work of subjugation.
This was months ago, and though it may be presumed that England has by this time been searched throughout, there is yet no bishop. Possibly the Nova Scotia churchmen overestimate their own turbulence, and underestimate the assistance of the officers of the peace. It might be worth while to try an everyday man of themselves, and see whether, after all, he may not be capable of preserving something like order. Bishop Colenso is said to have had weaknesses, and yet he long held away among the fiercest of all the untamed warriors on the African coast. The clergy of our sister province do well to be humble.
But they cannot be much more barbarous than the Zulus of Natal were when the heterodox mathematician assumed his bishopric.—St. John Sun.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs.
Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind mar 17 ood & wky

It is said that since Confederation twenty-two divorces have been granted by the Dominion Parliament. Sixteen of these were Ontario cases, the other six being from the Province of Quebec. Five applications are already in for next session.

$5000 REWARD.—Every testimonial we publish of Adamson's Botanic Balsam is genuine.
We will pay a reward of five thousand dollars for evidence proving otherwise in a single case.
F. W. Kinsman & Co. Trial bottles 10 cents.

His Lordship the Bishop of St. John, N. B., has forwarded to Rome the sum of $2,250, being the offerings of the diocese of St. John on the occasion of the Jubilee of His Holiness the Pope.

The Australian government offer a reward of $125,000 for the effectual extermination of rabbits in the colonies.

Ninety-five cigar factories in Havana have shut down, owing to the demands of cigarmakers for an increase of wages.
