Our Trade With Great Britain.—The British trade returns for the month of December have just been issued. The imports from Canada amounted in value to £581,736, which is a decrease from the previous December of £39,809. The exports to Canada shows a considerable decrease, the total for the month being £244,899, or £70,556 less than for December, 1892. The total imports from Canada for the year amounted to £10,236,371, being a decrease as compared with 1892 of £715,424. The exports to the Dominion for the year totalled £4,754,824, showing a decrease of £67,450 as compared with last year.

Sensational Case in Ireland.—An extraordinary and sensational charge of conspiracy to murder is being investigated at Ulster Assizes, in which two county Armagh farmers are accused of entering into a plot with two other men named Canaher and Burns, to drown James Thompson, cousin of the prisoners, with the object of coming into possession of property valued at $5000, which Thompson inherits from an uncle of the parties concerned. Sergeant Dodd, Q. C., in opening the case for the crown, said Canaher and Burns were each to get £4 for putting Thompson out of the way, but the former, while under the influence of drink, gave the affair away. The arrangement was that while Thompson was returning from chapel he was to be thrown into a hole for steeping flax by the party in ambush. The police getting a clue to the affair, on proceeding to the place where the tragedy was to have been enacted, found one of the prisoners secreted behind a dead wall.

NEWS NOTES.

Twenty-one sealers have sailed from Victoria, B. C., so far carrying 74 Indians and 428 whites. This constitutes one-third of the entire fleet.

Mme. Alice de Stellina, once a well-known opera singer who commanded a splendid salary, died in Milwaukee in extreme poverty on Christmas day and was buried by a kind-hearted friend.

An Austrian Duke has invented a machine gun which discharges 450 shots a minute. All one has to do is to turn on the tap and the gun does the rest. For producing a cemetery effect in a landscape it is said this arm has no equal.

The Yankees call the tune to "God Save the Queen," "America," and are very anxious to prove it is not of British origin. One of the New York papers made out that it was probably sung before the flood. The Albany Journal now says that "it was undoubtedly composed by Dr. John Bull, music teacher to Queen Elizabeth, about 1600." New York papers will please take note of the fact and give credit for the tune they have borrowed from the old country, which they sometimes affect to despise.

An article appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette, a few days ago, repudiating the assertion made at Toronto by Mr. Stead to the effect that England would think no worse of Canada for discriminating against the Mother Country in trade, should the United States demand such a course as a condition of reciprocal trade with Canada. Such a breach of the imperial contract, the Gazette says, "would lead to disintegration of the empire." If Canada prefers a continuance of British connection and to be on good terms with the British market, she had better not risk discrimination against the Mother Country to the extent involved in the demand of the United States. Our Ministers never acted more wisely than when they declined to accept reciprocity upon such terms.

The death is announced of a colored woman at West Troy at the age of 105 years. As few of the old colored people who were once slaves have any record of their birth, instances of remarkable longevity among them must be taken with reservations. "How old are you?" asked a lady of a little colored boy whom she wished to befriend. "If ye go by years I guess I'se about fohteen, but if ye go by de fun I'se had, I'm 'bout a hundred." It is strongly suspected that these old colored persons reckon their years by the fun they've had.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

SEWERAGE AND "ONE OF THE GANG."

Sir,—When a writer is unwilling to assume responsibilty for his statements, it is scarcely necessary that others should question their reliability. The authorship of "One of the Gang," ancient history and modern nonsense will doubtless be charged against some respectable citizen, and others will probably rest under the ungenerous suspicion of being parties to its compilation. Come out of your shell, man, and let the public judge for themselves whether you are "profitable to the city," or an unreasonable bill of expense. You might also give us some facts and figures in support of your contentions (that is if you have any) and thus enable citizens to find out what you are driving at.

If I understood Mr. Heartz's letter aright, he claimed that consequent upon the introduction of sewers in Halifax, the waste and extra consumption of water had so exhausted the supply, that at present there is insufficient water to meet the ordinary requirements of the city. In this contention he is endorsed by the Engineer of Halifax, whose report says:

"Notwithstanding the fact that the supply, considered sufficient at the inception of the works, has been multiplied by from 12 to 15, while the population has not even doubled, we are again compelled to consider the question of an increase."

Again—

"That the consumption of daily supply has been reached, has been proved by the fact that at times the draught is so great that not only is there no pressure on Quinpool Road, but the water does not fill the pipes."

Sir, the whole report is a long lament at the fact that the rater and consumption largely exceeds that of other cities, that there was once a good pressure for fire purposes, and abundant supply for ordinary uses, while at present their "city stopcocks have had to be partially or entirely closed in order to give a supply to houses which otherwise would have none." Montreal, a large shipping, railroad and manufacturing centre (without sewerage) has a daily consumption of about seventy gallons per head. Halifax (with sewerage) uses about three times that quantity. Comment is needless.

According to data at hand, the system of sewerage proposed for Charlottetown is to carry off no surface drainage, no roof water, and no filth of a solid nature. Its functions are therefore to carry off suds and waste water and the contents of water-closets. The Halifax Engineer reports thus;

"The most important recommendation I could make for the prevention of waste is the abolition of all hopper water closets."

Further on:

"In my opinion, these closets are responsible for the greater part of the disease which the city authorities have tried to stamp out."

While willing to profit by the experience of other cities, we should also be guided by our own reason and deal with the sewerage question in the light of our requirements, and according to surrounding circumstances. Is our water system capable of supplying a million and a half gallons of water per day, and if not, what will it cost to build an additional pumping station, in order to augment the supply and bring it up to the probable quantity required, if sewerage be adopted. Should a second pumping station be necessary, is there another water source available from which we can procure as pure a water as we now enjoy, or will it be necessary to destroy our present excellent system by connecting it with another stream of inferior water.

The health idea pops up in this as in many other questions. I dare not ask space to discuss this now, but I would certainly enjoy reading an article on this subject from some of those brilliant sewerage luminaries who claim a monopoly of the "light." Let us know about the miasma of swamps and low localities, the dead animals lying about our yards and streets, the many forms of decaying vegetable and animal matter and the adaptability of the proposed sewerage to remove them. These are very important matters for discussion; but they do not appear to be included in the catalogue of our modern sanitarians who propose to convert our already healthy city into a haven of health by carrying the suds and slops away, and leaving solid disease festering at every turn.
