Sentenced To 5 Years On Negligence Charge

Edward Matthews was sentenced to five years in the Dorchester Penitentiary by Mr. Justice Mark R. MacGuigan in the Supreme Court yesterday. The sentence follows the conviction of Matthews by a petit jury last week on a charge of criminal negligence resulting in bodily harm to the late Joseph Frederick Steele. Matthews' counsel, Mr. J.A. MacDonald, Q.C., presented a plea of mercy to the court previous to the sentence. He said that owing to the report of the petit jury he also hoped the court would take into consideration the alleged mentality and appreciation of things that is allegedly possessed by the accused. Crown prosecutor was J.P. Nicholson.
The trial judge in sentencing stated that he had taken into account the plea of Mr. MacDonald and also the recommendation of the petit jury. He said however, that he thought in order for the accused to become a useful and responsible citizen that he would have to receive some education and become separated from his present associates. He said that the accused would have to start a new way of life and that in order to accomplish these things and to reform from his present life that he must be imprisoned for the term imposed. The maximum sentence for the charge is ten years.
Justice MacGuigan further stated that it was his hope that the accused would take advantage of the facilities offered in the institution and get an education and learn a trade so that when his term is served that he still a young man, would be a useful citizen and a benefit to his family. Matthews is now 24 years old.
The conviction and sentence climaxed a long investigation by the City Police who thought for several days following Steele's death that the victim had died from natural causes accompanied by self-incurred injuries and exposure. Rumors, which later proved true, that the victim had been struck by a car, were the first indication that a crime had been committed and aroused the suspicions of the police to investigate.
