LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Revision Courts in King's County.

SIR.—Judge Reddin began the revision of the voters' lists for King's County at West River, Lot 47, on Wednesday, the 6th inst., and on Thursday opened a court for the same purpose at Souris East.
The proceedings were uneventful until the afternoon, when Dr. McIntyre, M. P., made a most disgraceful attack upon John McLean, Esq., M. P. P., abusing the latter gentleman in a style worthy of the vilest scoundrel in Billingsgate.
Mr. McLean effectually defended himself, and in the opinion of those present gave the doctor a true description of his own moral character. This so maddened the latter that all he could say was that "Mr. McLean had the smell of Belfast on him," and insinuated that, consequently, he was unfit for any society.
Will the electors of Belfast allow one of their own friends to be insulted by the grits in this way? Dr. McIntyre knew he was in the wrong, but still he thought to make some political capital by reminding the Catholics present that McLean came from Belfast, and consequently should get no fair play. The Judge very properly interfered and stopped the discussion, but it was with the utmost difficulty that Dr. McIntyre could be made to end his torrent of abuse.
This is the man whom the Grits have chosen as their champion, and is the bosom friend of Louis H. Davies, M. P. Will Mr. Davies publicly repudiate the insinuation of his friend that there is a "bad smell" about the people of Belfast, or does he also agree with the assertion?
Souris, 7th Nov., 1889.

Military Notes.

The Canada Militia Gazette has suggested that the Canadian infantry get up an efficiency competition. The idea is to have each corps inspected by General Middleton, who would give points for superiority. "Bluenose," writing from Halifax to the Gazette on the subject, says:—
"Allow me to congratulate you on your suggestion that the Canadian infantry should get up efficiency competitions similar to that currently so popular with the artillery. Coopers to the contrary notwithstanding, the Canadian militia make steady progress, and I think the time has now arrived when there are corps enough taking pride in superior accomplishments to make such a competition a success as a Dominion affair. We down here never get a chance to show side by side with the corps of the big cities of Ontario and Quebec, except, of course, in the friendly columns of your bright little paper (long life to it), and since we cannot have other than these paper parades together, we would like the comparison to be more sharply defined, as it would be by the figures of a general efficiency competition. Gen. Sir Fred Middleton now inspects nearly all the city corps annually, and I am sure that he would visit and give points to all those entered in such a competition were he requested to do so. We would thus secure an impartial verdict, from the best qualified judge."
Concerning the proposal to establish a Canadian rifle league, a correspondent writes to the Militia Gazette as follows:—
"I have a few suggestions to make concerning the rifle league, and in making them feel that I speak for many other riflemen. These are: 1. That the prizes should be awarded to the teams making the highest aggregate scores, instead of those winning the greatest number of matches. 2. That the times of firing should be two in May, two in June, two in July, and one in August—seven in all. August is pretty much taken up with the provincial and other big meetings, and it is desirable that the league matches should be all over before the D. R. A. meeting, when there can be a meeting of all the teams and suggestions made for the next year's league. I would suggest also three big telegraphic matches, such as that recently held—one on the Queen's Birthday, one on Dominion Day, and one on some other day suitable."

Horse Notes.

"No horse is or ever was worth $100,000," said Mr. Bonner, "but Axtell is the most wonderful three-year-old that has ever appeared and could his purchaser be assured that he would live to a ripe old age, he might, even at this extraordinary price, prove a good investment. Unfortunately, well bred and high priced horses are not exempt from sickness and death, as I realized in the loss of my horse Nutbourne, who died recently, after an illness of a few hours. I saw a letter from a gentleman in Philadelphia offering to pay the bearer $5,000 if he would purchase Maud S. at $100,000. I said in reply that no horse was worth such a sum, but that a man might as well ask me to put a price on a member of my family as on Maud."
Advertising is the rhetoric and not the logic of trade; it's business is to persuade and convince.—The Modern Advertiser.

The Cronin Murder Trial.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Robert T. Stanton, a printer, of Lake View, testified that he had printed a lot of business cards for defendant, Patrick O'Sullivan, which he delivered to O'Sullivan, May 2, two days before Dr. Cronin was murdered. Witness was then shown a card and identified it as similar to those which he had printed. The evident object was to show that it was one of this lot of cards which was shown to Dr. Cronin on the night of May 4th, when he was lured away to his death.
Herman Thiel, a saloon keeper, testified that early on the morning of May 5th, in company with two friends, he drove through Evenston Avenue, Lake View. He discovered a trunk broken open lying in the ditch by the road. He said it contained cotton batting, clotted with blood, and he and his friends drew it out of the ditch and placed it on the edge of the street. Witness identified the blood-stained trunk in the courtroom as the one he referred to.
Herman Pause and Carl Knopf, who were with Thiel when the trunk was discovered, corroborated his testimony.
Job Phillips, policeman, of Lake View, said that on the 23rd or 24th May he went to O'Sullivan's house to arrest him, and that while there O'Sullivan, looking toward the Cronin cottage, saw a number of people going into it and said: "What are they going in there for, the fools?"
William L. James, a lad 16 years old, testified that in February last he occupied a room in the Opera House Block overlooking the upper flat at 117 Clarke Street. In that month he often saw two men in these rooms. He identified the prisoner, Kunze, as one. Kunze was washing his feet, and as soon as he discovered the witness looking at him he pulled down the blind.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Wm. Mertes, a milkman, identified Kunze and Coughlin as the men who drove the buggy up to the Carlson cottage on the night of May 4th.
Ex-policeman Capt. Michael J. Schaak testified in regard to a conversation held with Patrick O'Sullivan, on May 28. He said he had known Cronin six or seven years. He made his acquaintance to speak to him about two weeks before the spring election, the latter part of last March. O'Sullivan said the meeting of the Irish Nationalists at which he first spoke to Cronin was held for the benefit of the poor in Ireland. Capt. Schaak continued, that at this interview O'Sullivan admitted, after much hesitation, that Coughlin telephoned to him in April about getting ice. He first denied that he had telephoned to Coughlin, but subsequently admitted that he had talked to Coughlin about Kunze. He asked O'Sullivan where he was on the 4th of May, and he said on an ice wagon all day. He asked him what time he came home in the evening. He said about seven or half-past seven. He had his supper and went to bed about eight or half-past eight. He asked him if he was positive he was not away from his house on that night. He said he was positive he was not; he was in his house all the evening. After he was in jail a day or so, he sent for me and told me he had forgotten to tell me he was out of the house that night. He said he was in the rear of the shed but no further.
The examination of Acting Captain Herman Schuttler, of the police, brought out fact that the officer has in his possession sections of the floors of the bed-room and hall of the Carlson cottage, bearing footprints in paint, the paint being identical with that put on the floor of the front room to conceal the Cronin blood stains. Schuttler also said he had a blind from the cottage on which there were finger marks of the same paint. He was being cross-examined when the court adjourned.

Farm Notes.

Keep a memorandum of rainy-day jobs posted up somewhere so that they will not be forgotten when the day comes.
It is said that France expends annually $300,000 in the improvement of her horses, with a view of obtaining hardy-bred animals, whose endurance makes them especially valuable for such irregular services as is required of the Cossacks of Russia, the Uhlans of Germany, and our mounted infantry.
Keep the bull where he can see people and have something to interest him, says F. D. Curtis. We had a bull which was getting ferocious all by himself, and when put where he could see everyone going from the house to the barn, and the cattle, dogs, chickens and horses, he became quiet and docile. It is not only the food which makes a good bull, but an opportunity to see about, and agreeable surroundings. A lonely bull will be uneasy and ugly, and when closely confined they are in an unnatural condition.
Don't rob ground of more than you give back to it. This maintains fertility, and fertility affords quantity and quality. Did you ever think that hay mown from a sterile meadow is less nutritious than that from land rich in vegetable-producing material? It is even so; and we cannot be too careful in preserving the virgin strength of soils that grow food for dairy cattle; So, do not turn your cows into your meadows this autumn. You cannot afford to, even if you are rich. The pastures have ceased to throw up tender grass in abundance, the matting of roots have performed their functions for one season, and we can expect but little aid from them again before another spring. Let us not overtax the meadows by cropping the aftergrowth of grass that is designed as a matting to protect the roots during the winter. Autumn food for cows must be raised elsewhere than on the meadow.
The man who does not find advertising profitable generally finds business unprofitable.—N. C. Fowler, Jr.
