bit how glad he was that Ragged-Ear had come to the Old Pasture, and expressed the hope that he would stay a long time. He really did hope so, too, only not in the way that he meant Ragged-Ear to think. He tried to appear to be a good neighbor. He offered to show Ragged-Ear all the pleasant places in the Old Pasture. He made only one mistake—he grinned too often. Each time he did this, he showed all his long, sharp teeth, and the sight of these made Ragged-Ear uneasy, so that he kept putting off Reddy's invitation. Then he was warned by Sammy Jay that Reddy wasn't the friendly person he seemed to be. So Ragged-Ear put Reddy off and put him off. Somehow he couldn't trust that smooth tongue.

When Reddy found that pretending to be a good neighbor wouldn't work, and that the young Rabbit was still suspicious, he decided to try another way.

"I'll scare that rascal so that he won't dare stay here any longer. I'll threaten him with dreadful things so that he'll leave that bramble-tangle the first time he thinks he has a chance. I'll be watching. Once he gets out from under those briars and brambles I'll catch him before he can reach another place of safety. I'll frighten him so that he won't want to stay a minute longer than he has to," said Reddy to himself.

"You silly young Rabbit!" he snarled.

So now he became another Fox altogether. He no longer grinned; he snarled. He no longer looked pleasant, but very, very ugly. "You silly young Rabbit!" he snarled. "You think you are smart, but you are not smart enough. You think I can't get you, but that is your mistake. You think I can't get in where you are, but I can, and that is just what I am going to do. I am going to drive you out of there, and when I do you won't have any place to go."

Just then he heard Mrs. Reddy barking for him. He barked an answer, telling her that he would join her. Then once more he snarled at frightened little Ragged-Ear. "I've got to go now," snarled Reddy, "but I'll be back. And when I do come back you and I will become better acquainted than we are now." He licked his lips in a most unpleasant manner. It sent little shivers down the backbone of the young Rabbit.

Ragged-Ear watched him out of sight. "Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" he cried. "What shall I do?"

"Sit tight," said a harsh voice. "Stay right where you are." It was Sammy Jay.

"But he says he'll come in and get me!" cried the frightened young Rabbit.

"He won't," declared Sammy Jay positively. "He thinks too much of that fine coat of his and his skin to try to get in through all those briars. Just you sit tight. That is all you need do."

ATHENS, Oct. 15—(AP)—U. S. Navy Secretary Dan Kimball said today combined Greek-Turkish strength could not be over-run in the event of an attack by a neighboring country. After an inspection of the two N.A.T.O. nations' defences, he said he was impressed by the great increase in military power they have achieved in the last 12 months.

Junior League Monthly Meeting

The regular monthly business meeting of the Junior League of the Charlottetown Hospital was held at the Nurses Residence on Tuesday, October 9th, with the president, Mrs. Alex MacIsaac, presiding.

The meeting, with forty-two members present, was opened by prayer, after which fifteen new members were officially welcomed into the club. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, as was also the treasurer's report.

The past president, Mrs. George Chandler, then gave a very interesting and detailed report on the Maritime Hospital Convention which she and Mrs. Alex MacIsaac attended last summer, held at St. Andrew's, New Brunswick.

The various committees gave reports on their different activities, the ways and means showing a substantial sum made at the recent Hospital Bazaar. Many activities were outlined for the coming year, and arrangements were completed for a Formal Thanksgiving dance at the Clover Club on Monday, October 13.

On motion of Mrs. W. Lawlor, seconded by Mrs. Reg. Cronin, the meeting was adjourned, after which lunch was served by the executive.

AN E. B. EDDY PRODUCT

HEINZ puts in the CREAM

You add ONLY water

RESULT: real Cream of Tomato Soup

SAVE 1/2 PINT OF MILK with every tin of HEINZ CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP

When you buy straight Tomato Soup and add an equal amount of milk to produce a soup that tastes something like Cream of Tomato Soup, you lose out on getting a rich creamy flavour and you also lose out on the cost—especially the way prices are today.

Why not buy Cream of Tomato Soup to start with, as made by Heinz. Then you can save on milk and get a better result by simply adding water. Instead of a milky tomato soup you will get the true creamy taste most people enjoy—for Heinz Cream of Tomato Soup is made with thick country cream.

Remember, too, that this soup is much more flavourful because only pedigreed tomatoes are good enough for Heinz.

Try a comparison between straight tomato soup diluted with milk and Heinz Cream of Tomato Soup with only water added. When you have tasted the wonderful difference you will want to stock up with Heinz and eat happily ever after.
