HUNTERS'

and, that toward season's end they had to drive from 30 to 45 miles to really get into rabbits. In some swamps it was nothing unusual to see three or four rabbits crossing an opening ahead of the hounds. Some went so far as Fredericton, Covehead, Savage Harbour, Blooming Point, Flat River, Wood Islands, Cardigan and Dundas before having the sport they formerly enjoyed a half hours drive, or less, from Charlottetown.

FOOLING YOURSELF

Don't ever delude yourselves rabbit hunters... rabbits can be shot down to numbers where hunting them ceases to be a sport. The days, like the twenties, when they were snared and shipped to the City in hundreds are gone forever. Even in the twenties this depletion was observed and resulted in suitable legislation being passed to curb this waste of wildlife. Due to the pressure of sportsmen the Game Act now carries a penalty of from $10.00 to $50.00, or to both fine and imprisonment, for feeding rabbits to foxes, mink or other animals. Here is another point to consider: This winter it was possible to drive all over the province in quest of rabbits. What if we had a tough winter and hunting range was limited to a few miles this season? It's no use hiding your heads in the sand like an ostrich. I issued advance warning about our black ducks so don't say I didn't tip you off about our rabbits. A daily bag limit of five on rabbits will never cramp a sportsmen's style... It's only the game hogs that will feel the pinch.
