Work Completed By Icebreaker

The prevailing southwest wind has opened the Strait of Canso although there is still some heavy ice around the Magdalens and Bird Rock, which a shift of wind might drive into that area again, was the report made by Capt. Angus Brown last evening, following a routine flight on ice observation yesterday.

Northumberland Straits are all clear except for Egmont Bay and several heavy pieces observed in Summerside harbour which may be easily avoided in daylight. Several sealers were reported still operating north of St. Paul's Island and also off the Magdalens. The icebreaker "D'iberville" has completed her work at Sydney and steamed north yesterday up the gulf to resume operations in the St. Lawrence river.
