OUR BOYS AT PAARDEBERG.

"Canada may well be proud of her noble boys. The deep sorrow that has entered into the hearts of loved ones far away will undoubtedly be tempered by the comforting assurance that all have done their duty—all, every one." Father O'Leary, Chaplain to Canadian Contingent.

"We lay for 14 hours on our faces and hands with bullets flying over our heads. But nobody flinched when we saw Father O'Leary walking about smiling and talking to the men. He helped all night looking for the dead and the wounded and performed the last rites at the grave of our heroes who died." Corporal O'Reilly.

"I know you will be proud of us, mother. After the surrender of Cronje, Lord Roberts personally thanked us for being the immediate means of bringing it about."

"The name Canadian is now a synonym for bravery, dash and courage." English Press.

Proud of them! Yes, on every side, Through all our vast domains, Lead hearts beat high in loving pride And soar in praiseful strains,

For those who chose dread danger's lot With eyes unto the goal, Whose deeds no tide of time may blot From off the nation's soul.

Who may not answer to roll call, And who have victory won; Who shall not say, "God bless them all! They have their duty done."

Fredericton Items.

A great deal of snow is in this section now and the farmers are beginning to think that the spring's work will be somewhat late.

Considerable mussel mud has been hauled from the cars here this winter. This manure proves very beneficial to the land in this locality, and the farmers say it pays well at $7 per car.

Refuge Division is in splendid condition. An interesting journal is prepared every month and proves very helpful. The next issue will be on the 19th, and is under the management of the teachers of the Hazel Grove and Fredericton schools.

Mr. J. W. McLennan, of Hazel Grove, has left us for a term in the P. E. Island Commercial College. We wish him success as he is very highly respected in this locality.

Mr. A. McLean, merchant, is doing a good business.

Our genial blacksmith, Mr. H. S. Weeks is kept busy and is turning out good work as usual.

Death of Mrs. Campbell

Mrs. Jane Campbell died at Steilacoom, Feb 6th, 1900, aged 74 years. She was born at Charlotte, Prince Edward Island, of Scotch ancestry, and when a young woman moved to Wisconsin with her husband, Judge Alexander Campbell, who survives her.

In 1881 they came to Tacoma, where Judge Campbell practiced law for several years, coming here from Nevada. In 1889 they removed to American lake, where they have resided up to within a short time, when they moved to Steilacoom with their son, Judge Fremont Campbell.

Mrs. Campbell was a lady of strong womanly character, and leaves many friends to mourn her. She leaves two daughters and three sons: Mrs. Isabella Howe, of Chicago, Mrs. Libbie Hall, of Spokane, James Campbell, of Minneapolis, George Campbell, of St. Paul, and Fremont Campbell of this city.

The funeral will be held at the residence of Judge Campbell at Steilacoom tomorrow at 1 o'clock.

The above obituary notice is clipped from a Tacoma paper of February last.

The Mrs. Jane Campbell whose death is reported was a native of New London, and a sister of the late Captain George McKenzie, of French River. Judge Alexander Campbell is the oldest brother of William Campbell, M. L. A., of Sea View. Judge Campbell left P. E. Island in 1848. He studied law after going to the United States and was admitted to the bar. He practiced in Nevada for several years and went to Tacoma in 1881. He was appointed City Attorney and assisted in organizing the present Municipal Government writing all the city ordinances and bylaws. He was afterwards elected Judge on several occasions.

Judge Campbell is hale and hearty. His mind is apparently as clear as when his brother last saw him 52 years ago. He writes a good legible hand yet. In a letter written to his brother last April (of 19) pages he gave him a splendid description of the City of Tacoma and surrounding country. He is now in his 83rd year.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—It is stated that General Villebois suggested the new policy of counter attack upon the lines of British communication. If so, he fell a victim to his own tactics.

—At a meeting in London to mourn over the centenary of the union of Ireland and Great Britain, Mr. Redmond, M. P., spoke of the United States as the land, "whose latch-string was never drawn in against the meanest child of Adam's kin." The expression was as inaccurate as poetic effusions frequently are. If Mr. Redmond was to present himself at the New York threshold, in an old suit and without $10 in his pocket he would not only find the latch-string drawn in, but the hole it should hang out of plugged up. The alien labor law and other typical Washington statutes have been passed since Mr. Redmond's theory had a basis.

A PECULIAR WILL.—An incident in Dumas' famous novel, "The Count of Monte Cristo," which has been regarded as about the most extravagant in that extravagant story, has just been paralleled in London. Miss Martin Edith Moore, who died possessed of considerable property, was anxious to make her will, but she had lost the power of speech and writing, though her intellect continued unaffected. At the suggestion of her attending physicians two packs of cards were prepared, one with the names of her relatives and the other with the names of the various divisions of her property. The testatrix carefully picked out, sorted out, and arranged the two packs in accordance with her testamentary intentions. An executor was selected by the same process. A will was drawn up in compliance with these unprecedented "instructions" and read over and signed with her mark. That will has been declared valid by Sir Francis Jenne in the probate court.

PERSONAL.

Mortimer Menpes, who is looking for subjects for his brush in the track of the war and who painted the portraits of Gen. and Mrs. Cronje, writes:—"Poor old Mrs. Cronje was in such a hurry to depart from the British camp that she left her back hair in a tent. This was at once seized by an enterprising Tommy Atkins and distributed in locks to those desirous of retaining some memory of the fair lady." Julian Ralph gives the following pen picture of Mrs. Cronje:—"She is a thin, decrepit old woman, and in her rough, shabby, dirty old black dress, and with one cloak or shawl of any sort, she presented a hopelessly miserable, draggled, wretched appearance."
