IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ELIZA A. CHING The death of Mrs. Eliza A. Ching occurred at her home at Black Pond in the early morning hours of Monday, July 24th, after a brief illness. Born in the year 1832, the daughter of the late Alexander and Grace Stewart of Red Point, she was the last member of a family of four. A brother and two sisters predeceased her. She was united in marriage to Peter Ching in May 1889. To this union were born five sons and one daughter, Tyler and Clarence of Black Pond; Harrison of Cambridge, Mass., who came to her bedside before she passed away; Grace, Mrs. Renfrew Cameron East Point, who tenderly ministered to her in the months she was indisposed before her final illness. Her husband and son Stewart died in 1918. Everett passed away in 1924, but in her sorrow she sought the comfort of Him who is our refuge and strength. In her girlhood she accepted Christ as her Saviour and maintained her faith throughout the joys and sorrows of the years. She was a woman of sterling character, firm and true in what she believed to be right. While her affection and fidelity centered in her loved ones it was by no means confined there, her motherly spirit often found an outlet beyond the confines of her home to minister to the sick, comfort the sorrowing and help in the hour of need. The floral offerings were many and beautiful, silent messengers of love. A very large gathering of relatives and friends assembled on the afternoon of July 25th to pay their tribute of respect to one who had lived long in their midst. Funeral services were held at her home and at the Christian Church, South Lake. Rev. H. R. Bell officiating. Hymns sung were "Nearer My God to Thee, and "Rock of Ages." Interment was in South Lake Cemetery. Pallbearers were: Stewart MacIntyre, Nelson Stewart, Emmanuel Sutherland, Aiyah Ching, Jerome Sutherland, Edson Rose.

Thoughts For Our Time

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan (Copyright)

Even though we all have that uncomfortable feeling that the world may be about to experience catastrophic events, the routine of everyday life has hardly been altered. While many of our young men may once again face the dangers of the battlefield, most of our youths will return to school in a few weeks to renew their explorations into the realms of nature and the thoughts of men. Education is normally considered the most important undertaking of society, yet such are the times that this autumn the annual movement back to school has an air almost of urgency. It seems somehow beside the point. Why should so much of the energies of a nation be turned toward teaching our youth what happened in 1066 when in 1950 they face the very immediate danger of a termination of their lives, or at least of the civilization that protects their way of life? Even now young men are dying in an almost unknown corner of Asia, and at any moment wars of a more serious nature may break out in other little known spots. An atom war which could obliterate our cities in a few hours is now a possibility. These are the facts which are so very real. We are already engaged in a serious enough conflict, but nevertheless men agree this is but the sign of the major East-West conflict. Self protection requires not only the successful completion of the Korean episode but the total mobilization of Western military strength for perhaps generations. Even if we plan on putting our foot on the future, the peace we achieve will be uneasy, for peace based on force alone usually means the deciding of issues by an appeal to force. Never in history has the world faced such a situation. The breakdown of the Roman Empire with the barbarian invasions saw the gradual dismemberment of a universal military power and its culture; feudal anarchy in the Middle Ages witnessed much social disruption and hardship; the wars of nation-states in the modern period caused the conquest of vast areas and the loss of millions of lives. But never before has the whole of mankind been faced with the possibility of almost total destruction of its material goods, of its civilization, even of its life. What has the education of Canadian children to do with this dreadful picture? In answer we may state that just as false education in the past has largely brought about this peril, so must true education effect the new culture of the future. If tomorrow is to see a civilization with greater unity, increasing scientific knowledge, intellectual advance and moral betterment, then we must amend our systems of education. Whether or not the terminus of the present age will be highlighted by atomic warfare with its concomitant material devastation, no one really knows. We do know, however, that the world of the past is crumbling and that the form of the future age we build will be determined by the intellectual and moral attitude of men. The formation of this attitude must come from education. Contemporary education has emphasized the obvious strides made in the study of the physical sciences. These studies have paid off in material prosperity. But unfortunately True education, while not neglecting science, must be directed primarily to the development of the intellect. A liberal education which stresses the pursuit of truth, wisdom and beauty must precede and indeed pervade the study of nature. Since God is the author of all truth, the painter of all things beautiful, the source of wisdom as well as the creator of all nature, how can true education ignore Him? We do not mean to suggest for a moment that the greatest attention should not be placed on developments in engineering, in medicine, in physics, in chemistry, in psychology and sociology. The physical and social sciences must continue to reap the benefit of the "scientific age." Men must continue in the free pursuit of these studies, along with these of history, fine art and modern and classical literature. But above all these must come the vision offered by the light of philosophy and theology. Most of the founding fathers of our educational systems were religious men, but God was slowly exiled from the schools not because religion was considered unimportant, but because it was thought that theology in the schools was unnecessary. It is the great challenge of today to centre education in God. While often we are not conscious of the fact, the ideas of "freedom," "democracy" and "progress" which we cherish so highly are essentially Christian in their origin. Whether we are going to lose completely this heritage of the past or whether we are going to develop these great ideals even further depends upon our attitude toward education. We have seen what the false gods of materialism, of racism and of classism in education have wrought. Now it is our task to destroy these war-bringing, soul-destroying idols and in their stead place God as the ultimate end of education, just as He is the beginning and end of life itself. We can criticize our schools for escaping from the realities of life only if our schools forget the source of life—Almighty God Himself.
