ANIMAL REHEARSALS

TRICK DOGS AND CATS AND THEIR WAYS OF LEARNING.

Their Trainer Explains the Need of Flattery and Courtesy in Dealing With Cats—Differences Between Dogs and Cats—Tricks Explained.

The Tschernkoff dogs were the original interpreters of realistic canine drama. They were talked of in several countries, but their performance seems quite amateurish in comparison with that of the new canine stars whose trainer is Leonidas.

Leonidas is a Greek wanderer upon the face of the earth. He does not speak any English except "up" and "bravo" and "thank you," but that does not matter. For all his cats and dogs understand his French perfectly. The company was rehearsing the other morning when a reporter obtained entrance into the theatre to ask Leonidas how he trained his animals. They were doing circus tricks with evident zest, when he told them to sit down in their chairs and remain there until he called them. Their prompt and cheerful obedience would have gladdened any heart.

"I train my dogs and cats," explained the master in response to a question, "by kindness and patience—oh, so much patience! The main thing is to get them to understand what you want them to do, and then they do it quickly enough. I am sure dogs and cats reason up to a certain point. They can reason sufficiently to understand what I want them to do. It isn't imitations, because I never show them what I want done, but explain what I wish and tell them to do it. Dogs have more reason than cats and are far easier to train. Cats are like women, capricious. One must coax them all the time. If you let a cat know that you are trying to make it do a thing, it won't do it. One must be always kind to them."

"Humph!" grunted the interpreter. "I wish you could see him and his sister-in-law."

Leonidas smiled blandly and, all unconscious of the comment added to the text, went on:

"I'd rather train 50 dogs than one cat. If I didn't have that black spaniel Cerberus, I would never undertake to train a cat. Cerberus was the first dog I ever trained, and he saved one of these cats from drowning, and she follows him, and all the other cats follow her. But about the training. An old dog or cat can be taught to do all sorts of things, but it is much easier to teach young ones. You have seen imbecile people. Well, we have imbecile cats and dogs, too; so it is well to select cats for training with a view to their intelligence. The wolf dogs learn more easily than any other. Different kinds of dogs excel in different kinds of stage work. Any dog that looks like a fox is excitable and does quick work that other dogs, say a poodle, couldn't do at all. Some dogs do their work with a perfect understanding, while others do theirs mechanically. This is usually the fault of the trainer and results from beating the animals.

"One must love animals and understand them in order to train them. I've been in this business all my life. I trained horses to do all kinds of tricks and had never thought about training dogs and cats until I ran across that black water spaniel one day when I was exhibiting my trained horses. I was standing on Westminster bridge and saw a child fall into the water. That spaniel, Cerberus, jumped in and rescued the little one, and I said I would own that dog. I soon taught it to dive for my purse when I dropped it into 15 feet of water. Not long after that Cerberus saved the cat from drowning. I thought it would be a good idea to teach the cat some tricks too. It takes two years to train a cat well, but much less time is required to educate a smart dog. I worked with Cerberus and the cat he saved three years, and then I began to enlarge my company.

"To teach them new tricks I tell them what I want done and flatter them into doing it. For instance, when I wanted to teach Mimisse, the cat, to climb up a rope the full height of the stage, open and enter a basket attached to a parachute, which I let loose, I held her on the rope and said,

"Up, up, up!" and poured her all the while. Soon she knew that it would please me if she would go up and up she started. When she got to the top, I told her to open the basket and get in. She understood that, because she opens and enters a basket which my Great Dane holds in his mouth. I let the parachute down very gently at first, but after she had done the trick several times I could bring it down as suddenly as I pleased. The time required for learning a new trick depends on the trick and upon the individual intelligence of each one of the pupils.

"Some men train animals by hunger. I can't believe in that method, for you can't rely on them, particularly not on cats. A cat will prow around and get something to eat somehow, and then when the time comes for it to act it won't act so as to be fed afterward, for it is already satisfied. I feed my dogs and cats at 4 o'clock every afternoon, for I'm convinced that they do better work when not hungry.

"It is not necessary to rehearse trained animals every day. They are so familiar with what they do, they learn their lessons so well, that they do not forget. In fact, they often perform better if they don't practice much after they've learned a thing, for they don't get so tired of it."

"Do you ever punish your dogs and cats?" asked the reporter.

"He'll say 'No,'" said the interpreter in an "aside" before putting the question to the Greek, "but he does all the same. He beats the dogs like fury occasionally, but not often."

"Oh, it's very seldom I have to whip one of the dogs," answered Leonidas, "and I wouldn't dare punish the cats at all. They are too contrary. Why, I believe if I struck one of those cats she would never act again."

"It takes a long time to get an idea into a cat's head. When I was teaching my company the circus act, I almost gave up in despair. The dogs act as horses and the cats as riders. A dog trots around the ring, passing under a chair on which sits a cat. As the dog comes out from under the chair the cat springs on his back and jumps on the chair again when the circus is completed. It is very hard for the cats to get a good grip, especially on the short haired dogs, and they used their claws at first to keep them from falling off. This hurt the dogs, and they would shake the cats off. It took me months to teach the cats that they must hold on by the pressure of their legs and not use their claws at all. Those things take flattery and patience; that's all."—New York Sun.

MESSAGE TO MEN.

Proving that Truth, Honesty and True Philanthropy by Still Exist.

If any man who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excesses or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood, after years of suffering from Nervous Debility, Loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

If he nothing to sell, and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-beings to a cure. I am well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and imposed upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind; but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy once more and am desirous therefore to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the proud satisfaction of having been of great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured. You Blooming Idiot!

Well, perhaps it was my fault, but never mind, I have a pot of "Quickcure" in my kit and it will cure our bruises before we get home. You never saw anything like the way it will heal a cut or a bruise of any kind, and for sprains and strains it is—well, it is just "out of sight."

HENRY IEVERS, L.D.S., Quebec, writes:

"One of my children sprained her ankle, which became much swollen and discoloured. Some 'Quickcure' was spread on linen, and applied; the pain ceased at once, the swelling was gone the next day, and on the fourth day she walked to school as usual. I have also proved it to be a wonderful remedy for cuts and bruises."
