Chocolate Bar-Size Radio Pages City Hosp. Doctors

Small devices about the size of a chocolate bar and weighing no more than an ordinary fountain pen are now being used by the Charlottetown Hospital for reliable, instant location of any doctor within the city limits.

The system itself, called the Multitone Personal Call, was introduced by an English firm and proven in over 39 different countires. The Multitone system obsoletes chimes, bells, lights, buzzers and loudspeakers for personal paging.

Carried by every doctor at the Charlottetown Hospital, these pocket receivers are set at individual frequencies, one for each doctor who can be contacted within a three-square-mile radius of the transmitter.

When actuated by the transmitter at the hospital, the receiver sends off short successive bleeps to the doctor letting him know he is needed in case of an emergency.

DR. FRANK MacMILLAN, Charlottetown, is holding the ultimate answer to every staff location problem. This pocket radio is known as the Multitone Personal Call system and is being used by doctors at the Charlottetown Hospital for instant fool-proof staff location.

RELIEVES SWITCHBOARD

Dr. Frank MacMillan told a reporter last night that the system is a relief to the switchboard operator who often has trouble locating doctors and other personnel at the hospital.

The little radio, clipped to the shirt pocket, is carried at all times and reliability is assured by continuous, never-off receiver operation, said the doctor who commented on an urgent call he recently received from the hospital as he was travelling on Pownal Street and stated that he arrived at the bedside of his patient in a matter of minutes.

No matter where a doctor is in the city or what he is doing, these battery-powered systems are efficient and noiseless and contact can be made in any situation because the unit is always on.

GREATEST RELIABILITY

The system operates in the 10-11 meter VHF range for greatest reliability with least chance of interference. Other transmitter models are available for coverage of up to 75 square mile areas.

Although the units have been used by Charlottetown doctors for only a month, it has been in operation in other parts of Canada and the United States where frequent contact is necessary in large industrial corporations and factories.

The type of system installed at the Charlottetown Hospital sends out a signal. No conversation can take place over the receivers and transmission is one way only.

The unit, which clips on the breast pocket like a pen, and doesn't weigh much more, gives off short 'bleep, bleeps' when actuated by the transmitter at the hospital, informing the wearer of this device that his presence is requested.

Small aerials have been installed on doctors automobiles which permits better reception in lower areas of the city where transmission would be nil without them.

The 20 units being used by doctors at the city hospital have proven quite successful and it is expected that this form of communication will soon become popular in other areas as well.

Travel Bureaus Gear For Influx

The department of tourist development's travel bureau organizations throughout the province and at Aulac, N.B., have been geared to cope with the heavy flow of tourists which has already began for 1965.

Acting travel bureau director Robert LeClair said yesterday the bureau's summer staff has been trained and is now manning the various bureaus throughout the province, as well as the two ferry services.

Indications are that 1965 will see a successful tourist season in the province. Mr. LeClair said tourist inquiries about the province at the end of May amounted to 600 more than last year.

Visitors are reaching the province in greater amounts every day and, according to Mr. LeClair, yesterday was one of the Charlottetown bureau's busiest days, with "as many as 17 tourists in at once for information."

Mr. LeClair estimates that the period from July 15 to Aug. 15 will be the province's busiest. He said that most resorts in the province are booked solid for that period.

A busy July 1 weekend is anticipated, with nearby provinces declaring a four-day holiday weekend.

Cancellation Causes EPA No Concern

GANDER, Nfld. (CP)—Eastern Provincial Airways says cancellation of its licence for certain charter and commercial air services from Charlottetown and Moncton will have no effect on its operations in the Atlantic provinces.

An EPA spokesman said Friday the licence was acquired when the airline purchased Maritime Central Airways in 1963. It provided for a "group B" service using small aircraft. It had not been used by MCA for many years and never by EPA. There was no longer sufficient demand for such service in the Maritimes.

The licence cancellation was announced Thursday in Ottawa by the Air Transport Board. EPA said it did not oppose the cancellation because it does not need the licence. The board's action was a routine procedure.

Potato Certification Officer Is Honored On Retirement

Members of the Seed Potato Certification staff, accompanied by their wives, gathered at the Women's Institute Hall, Parkdale, Wednesday to honor J. E. Stanley Maynard of Birch Hill, who is retiring from the service June 23.

Mr. Maynard was appointed to the staff of the plant protection division Oct. 7, 1947, as Inspector I and was promoted to Inspector II on April 1, 1959.

Mr. Maynard was well and favorably known, having served in several districts in Prince County and at the port of Summerside during the fall shipping season. His pleasant personality and genuine interest in every phase of the seed potato growing industry resulted in a very satisfactory association with growers, loaders and dealers in the province, as well as with his felow staff members.

After the dinner, served by the Parkdale Women's Institute, the chairman, G. C. Ramsay, called the meeting to order and an address was read by Gordon Ross during which H. S. Four Give Evidence In Joyriding Case

SUMMERSIDE — Clifford Blair Walsh of Albany, charged with taking a motor vehicle with the intent to operate it without the consent of the owner, had his case adjourned to July 6 by Magistrate W. Chester S. MacDonald in Prince County Court here yesterday.

Alex Campbell acted for the accused and George MacMahon acted for the crown. The crown called four witnesses; Bennett Charles Dawson, owner of the car in question; Mrs. Lloyd Walsh; Constable Maynard Roy, Charlottetown detachment of the RCMP, the arresting officer; and Constable William Edward Whalen, who spoke with the accused folowing arrest.

Mr. Dawson said that he had not given the accused permission to take his car. He stated that he did not do anything about it when he found the car was missing because he figured that it would be brought back. He stated the missing car was reported by his wife and that he had not told her to report it.

Mrs. Walsh, aunt of the accused, stated that when she saw the accused get into the car she told him that he had better not take it because it wasn't his. The accused told her that he wasn't going far and would not be long. The accused left in the car with her (Mrs. Walsh's) eight-year-old son, Brian. Mrs. Walsh stated she did not see the car until the next day in Charlottetown.

Constable Roy testified that he arrested the accused on Queen Street in Charlottetown the morning after the car was reported missing. The accused had the keys and gave them to Constable Roy who then took the car to the RCMP headquarters.

Constable Whalen testified that he drove from Borden to Charlottetown to pick up the accused for questioning.

A second case on yesterday's docket was that of Joseph Russell O'Brien of St. Eleanor's who was fined $10 and costs or five days on a charge of driving without due care and attention.

meeting during the day with the other mission appointees—Wilson and the prime ministers of Nigeria and Trinidad. Nkrumah gave his support to the peace mission even though his request was rejected.

Canada's Lester B. Pearson entertained at luncheon the severest critic of the mission, Prime Minister Julius Nyerere of Tanzania.

Pearson said UN Secretary-General U Thant could not move on the Viet Nam issue at present and no United Nations security council initiative appeared possible.

"While I think we ought to be pretty careful about going overboard with optimism because somebody may shoot this down before it takes off . . . nevertheless it was worth doing. . . . the Commonwealth does present a pretty wide selection of nations."

SEND MESSAGES

The conference briefing officer reported at the end of Friday's two sessions that the British foreign office—despite the difficulties — was going ahead with messages to the capitals scheduled to be visited by the mission.

These include Peking, Moscow, Hanoi, Saigon and Washington.

Kenya's delegation said Wilson should not lead the five-man peace mission and Britain itself should not even take part in the mission because it had committed itself to backing U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

The East African opposition to the makeup of the mission was a major setback for Wilson, who had told a cheering House of Commons Thursday night he hoped he and four other Commonwealth leaders could set out on their peace quest early in July.

The Australian delegation called a press conference to reply to Nkrumah's request for withdrawal of troops. Ghana earlier called a press conference on the same topic.

An Australian delegation member—stressing he was not seeking any "clash" with Gahana—said that his country's only motive is to protect the political freedom of South Viet Nam. He said that Nkrumah's request would have the effect of handing an advantage to the Communist Viet Cong.
