THE WAR-TRAIL!

"And were I to grant it, you could hardly rise soon enough, and pronounce your lukewarm leave taking. Ha, monsieur! think of the yellow domino!"

"Mam'selle, you take pleasure in mortifying me. Do you deem me capable of such fickleness? Suppose for a moment you are not what the world calls beautiful, you could not by removing your mask, also strip yourself of the attractions of your conversation—of that voice that thrills through my heart—of that grace exhibited in your every movement! With such endowments, how could a woman appear ill-looking? If your face was even as black as hers of the yellow domino, I verily believe I could not perceive its darkness."

"Ha, ha, ha! take care what you say, monsieur. I presume you are more indulgent than the rest of your sex; and well know I that, with you men, ugliness is the greatest crime of a woman."

"I am different, I swear—"

"Do not perjure yourself, as you will if I but remove my mask. I tell you, sir, that in spite of all the fine qualities you imagine me to possess, I am a vision that would horrify you to look upon."

"Impossible!—your form, your grace, your voice. Oh, unmask! I accept every consequence for the favor I ask."

"Then be it as you wish; but I shall not be the means of punishing you. Receive from your own hands the chastisement of your curiosity."

"You permit me, then? Thanks, mam'selle, thanks! It is fastened behind; yes, the knot is here—now I have it—so—"

With trembling fingers, I undid the string, and pulled off the piece of taffety. Shade of Sheba! what did I see?

The mask fell from my fingers, as though it had been iron at a cherry heat. Astonishment caused me to drop it; rather say horror—horror at beholding the face underneath—the face of the yellow domino! Yes, there was the same negress, with her thick lips, high cheek-bones, and the little well-oiled kinks hanging like corkscrews over her temples!

I knew not either what to say or do; my gallantry was clean gone; and although I resumed my seat, I remained perfectly dumb. Had I looked in the mirror at that moment, I should certainly have beheld the face of a fool.

My companion, who seemed to have made up her mind to such a result, instead of being mortified, burst into a loud fit of laughter, at the same time crying out in a tone of raillery: "Now, Monsieur le Poete, does my face inspire you? When may I expect the verses? To-morrow? Soon? Never? Ah! monsieur, I fear you are not more gallant to us poor 'ladies ob color' than your countrymen the lieutenant. Ha, ha, ha!"

I was too much ashamed of my own conduct, and too deeply wounded by her reproach, to make reply. Fortunately, her continued laughter offered me an opportunity to mutter some broken phrases, accompanied by very clumsy gestures, and thus take myself off. Certainly, in all my life, I never made a more awkward adieu. I walked, or rather stole, towards the entrance, determined to leave the ball-room, and gallop home. On reaching the door, my curiosity grew stronger than my shame! and I resolved to take a parting look at this singular Ethiopian. The blue domino, still within the niche, caught my eye at once; but on looking up to the face—gracious Heaven! it was Isolina's!

I stood as if turned into stone. My gaze was fixed upon her face, and I could not take it off. She was looking at me; but, oh! the expression with which those eyes regarded me! That was a glance to be remembered for life. She no longer laughed, but her proud lip seemed to curl with a sarcastic smile, as if scorn!

I hesitated whether to return and apologize. But no; it was too late. I could have fallen upon my knees, and begged forgiveness. It was too late. I should only subject myself to further ridicule from that capricious spirit.

Perhaps my look of remorse had more effect than words. I thought her expression changed; her glance became more tender, as if inviting me back. Perhaps—

At this moment, a man approached, and, without much ceremony, seated himself by her side. His face was towards me—I recognized Ijorra! Is it of—? If so, he will laugh. A world to see that man laugh, and know it is at me. If he does, I shall soon cast off the load that is crushing my heart!

He laughs not—not even a smile is traceable on his sombre features. She has not told him, and well for him she has not. Prudence, perchance, restrains her tongue; she might guess the result. They are on their feet again; she masks. Ijorra leads her to the dance; they front to each other; they whirl away—away; they are lost among the masker!

"Some wine, mezo!"

A deep long draught, a few seconds spent in buckling on my sword, a few more in reaching the gate, one spring, and my saddled steed was under me.

I rode with desperate heart and hot head; but the cool night-air, the motion of my horse, and his proud spirit, mingling with mine, gave me relief, and I felt calmer. On reaching the rancheria, I found my lieutenants still up, eating their rudely cooked supper. As my appetite was roused, I joined them at their meal; and their friendly converse restored for the time my spirit's equilibrium.

JOHN McLEOD,
Pres. Clerk.

Montague Items.

The river is still open and a few small craft await freights. Business is not lively owing to the poor sleighing.

Saturday last, three young men named Beers, from Lot 61, came to the bridge looking for a thrashing, and got more than they bargained for, though not all they deserved. Having visited the tax-collector, and used not very curious arts on some black and white bottles, the unclean spirits got into them, when they sought one Maclean's to find other more wicked spirits, failing which, they smashed several articles of glass, &c., in the store, and repaired to Messrs. Campbell & Co's, where they thought to repeat the process. However, they left for home without caps, their ears being warm enough to save them from the frost.

Two seafaring men fought on Sunday at noon on board a schooner lying in the stream, and then came on the Government wharf to finish. But one was too much to stand the other to it. So peace was proclaimed. One man had a bad cut under his eye. Rumor says they came from Point Prim; but they did not look at all prim on this occasion.
