Tupper-Ramsay Wedding

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. James Kaye and Mr. Kaye of Dartmouth, March 23rd, when Miss Gladys Naomi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ramsay, Unionville, became the bride of William Tupper, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Tupper of Dartmouth.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Kenneth MacMillan of Summerside, P. E. I. in the presence of immediate relatives and friends.

The bride was attired in a navy blue suit with matching accessories and wore a corsage of red roses. She was attended by her youngest sister, Iva Jeanette, who wore a gray suit with pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mr. Milton Selter supported the groom.

A dainty luncheon was served by Mrs. Kaye, assisted by her sister, Miss Edith Ramsay.

The following day the happy couple motored to O'Leary, where a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ramsay. The bride's table was centered with a two tier wedding cake decorated with a miniature bride and groom. They were the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts.

After prayer by the pastor, Rev. Owen Underwood, all left for their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Tupper many years of happy wedded life.

TRINITY EVENING AUXILIARY

The Easter meeting of the Trinity Evening Auxiliary was held in the Church Parlor, Summerside, on Tuesday evening, April 7th, with the president, Mrs. William Roach, in the chair.

Mrs. Ferno Rogers and Mrs. Eric Sheen were in charge of the program which opened with the singing of "Jesus Christ is Risen Today." Miss Jean Gordon was pianist.

After the meditation and prayer, Mrs. J. Hopkirk read the Scripture lesson. After the singing of "Hail Thou once despised Jesus" and the missionary benediction the study period was introduced. This was in regard to the life and activities of the different home and overseas missionaries.

During the business session seven hospital calls and ten house calls were reported. Mr. C. D. Matheson reviewed "Mary and the Black Warrior" one of the Eagle books and the president reviewed the book "South African Today".

Following the repeating of the Lord's Prayer the social hour was enjoyed and delicious refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

Enjoyable Easter Tea At St. Mark's

The St. Mark's Guild Easter Tea, held in St. Mark's Anglican Hall on Wednesday Afternoon, April 8th, was the outstanding event of Easter week in Kensington, and many of our guests from adjoining communities as well as a number from Summerside joined the ladies of the town at the attractive tables.

Pouring from three until four o'clock were Mrs. Lloyd Howard and Mrs. J. G. Townsend, and for the second hour, Mrs. J. Bradford Millman and Mrs. Ernest Mill present over the tea cups. The tea table featured a silver basket of red carnations flanked by candles in silver candle holders. Cut flowers and potted plants added their charm to the appointments and centered the small tables.

Many of our guests from adjoining communities as well as a number from Summerside joined the ladies of the town at the attractive tables.

This is the second annual Easter Tea put on by the Guild, and its success indicates that it will become a regular event as it has already become one to be anticipated with pleasure.

be raked from underneath pens and hauled away. The ground or floor should be limed and covered with marsh hay or other fine hay, spread evenly under the pens about April 15th to 20th. The pens should then be placed on this hay and arranged for the whelping season. This is necessary as kits are frequently carried out and dropped on the floor of the pen by a worried mother. Thus if pens are not placed on the ground, a large number of kits will fall through the "I" mesh and die.

Some ranchers use a false bottom or other protection underneath their pens to the floor. Bedding inside the dens should be watched closely. In fact, daily, as different females have different habits. Some females keep a cosy nest for long periods, while others insist on dragging most of the nesting material outside or dirtying it continually. The placing of an inch or so of dry shavings at the bottom of the den, with fine marsh or pasture hay to complete the nest makes an excellent bedding. When installing the hay in the nest box it is a good practice to place your closed fist in the centre and build the nesting material around it. This satisfies many of the females who otherwise would drag most of the hay out and rebuild it to their own satisfaction.

With the arrival of a litter, the first rule is "KEEP OUT OF THE NEST BOX!" This rule should be strictly followed for at least four to five days. Occasionally one may detect trouble in a certain nest, noted by the continuous whining of the kits, often accompanied by a restless female fretting because she is unable to provide enough milk for her young. On looking into the nest one generally finds a large litter, with a thin, worrying mother. At least half of these kits should be taken away and distributed to females having small sized litters of the same size kits.

One or two of these orphan kits to each female selected are usually readily accepted and made at home. In doing this, shut the foster mother outside and place the orphan kit or kits in with their new litter mates. Thus, when the female comes back in, the new kits have the same odor as her own, and are usually welcome additions to the litter, although not always.

A milk mother unquestionably rates among the best in any species. This fact sometimes is taken too much for granted. Many ranchers will tell you that the old female will carry enough food into the nest for her young, when they become old enough to eat. This is true to a certain extent. She will usually provide enough to keep her litter growing and healthy. However, large sized milk are desirable, which in turn gives large sized pellets.

To obtain this size, it is necessary to feed the kits in the nest boxes, even before their eyes are open. This is really amazing how soon the young kits will be sucking at this feed. This method relieves the mother's job to a large extent and frequently will prevent the loss of a mother, having become thin and unable to fully provide for her litter. There is another method of increasing the size of your milk, and worthy of mention. This is providing skim milk in the vestibule, just outside the nest box.

This can best be done by drilling an inch hole in the side of the box near the floor, then inserting into it the spout of a shallow type water pan. By spreading out the sides of the spout after insertion inside the hole, the pan will stay put. This method prevents the kits from getting into the milk pan, and thus keeps

BURGESS BEDTIME

Behind her panted Tuddy. Jumper the Hare really wasn't frightened at all. He wasn't frightened for the simple reason that he could run away from them any time he chose. The only thing that he was afraid of right then was that he might run into Mother Bear. Then he would be afraid. He wondered where she was, and how these black imps behind him happened to be out in the Green Forest all alone. It was fun letting them get close to him, then suddenly bounding away. He wasn't the least bit out of breath; he wasn't the least bit tired. He would let those black imps chase him for a while, then he would lose them. He would leave them so far behind they never would catch up.

Jumper seldom runs far in a straight line. He runs in circles. Sometimes he circles one way, and then another. Sometimes he runs a little way to the left, and then a little way to the right. Any one chasing him is likely to get mixed up unless one can keep him in sight all the time, or have a nose that can follow his scent.

Every time the two little cubs got tired, Jumper would wait for them. Sooner or later they would see him and start after him again. So he led them farther and farther away from the place where they had first seen him. He was getting them really lost, but they didn't know it. Yes, sir, he was getting them really lost.

As the kits grow larger and the weather warmer, more ventilation must be provided, or losses will result during warm, sultry days. Also, bedding should still be closely watched and regularly replaced with new, open bedding. Plenty of water of course, in a low pan, should always be provided.

There are many varied opinions published as to when and how to separate kits. Some recommend leaving litters together until fall, others claim two to a pen, because they play and thus eat more. I, personally, recommend the "one to a pen" idea. Separate the kits as soon as they are on their own and keen for their feed. From then on, it is a case of forcing as much feed into them as possible. Twice daily feeding or even three times, is beneficial, until August 1st.

The pens for these kits should be of wire all around, so as each can view his neighbours. A box, bottom, could be used as milk tray, having a haven to run into. Although the weather may be very cool at nights on occasion, milk will not be set back and can stand an amazing amount of cold, as long as they are kept dry. The wire bottom, of course, gives perfect satisfaction during hot periods.
