MR. AND MRS. WYMAN F. MOORE

Young Couple Plight Troth At Double Ring Ceremony

First United Church, Summerfield, P.E.I. was the setting for a pretty summer wedding Saturday August 18, at 2.30, when Carolyn Elizabeth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cedric L. Seamar of Springfield was united in marriage with Wyman Franklyn Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Eldon Moore of Summerside, P.E.I. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Lewis M. Murray.

Miss Joyce Key, in charge of the wedding music, accompanied Mrs. Phillip Chatto who sang the "Wedding Prayer", at the beginning of the ceremony and "Each For The Other" during the signing of the register.

Baskets of summer flowers decorated the church. The guest pews were marked with tiny wedding bells tied with pink satin bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father looked radiant in a floor length gown of white Chantilly lace and nylon net over bridal satin with fitted bodice featuring a scolloped neckline and long lily point sleeves. Her headdress was a pearl crown, which held in place her elbow length veil of tulle illusion. She carried a bouquet of red sweetheart roses with rosebuds attached to satin streamers which were draped from the leaves of a white lace covered bible, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Patrick Bennet, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, wore a blue street length dress of nylon sheer over taffeta with matching headdress and mitts. She carried a semi-cascade of apricot shasta daisies.

Miss Irma Moore, sister of the groom and Miss Alice Macdonald, friend of the bride, as bridesmaids wore identical dresses to that of the matron of honor in apricot sheer over taffeta. They wore matching floral headdresses and white accessories and carried semi-cascades of blue shasta daisies.

Miss Joy Seaman, sister of the bride, as flower girl wore a mauve hand embroidered nylon over taffeta dress, with floral headdress, white accessories and carried a basket of yellow mums and white shasta daisies. Master Timothy Austin, was ring bearer, he carried the rings on a white heart shaped cushion, with satin streamers tied with rosebuds.

Mr. William Camp, Moncton, N.B. friend of the groom, was best man. Lindsay Seaman, brother of the bride and Clayton Ward, friend of the groom were the ushers.

For her daughters' wedding, Mrs. Seaman chose a dress of navy lens ribbonide weave viscose over white polka-dot satin with white accessories, her corsage was of white feathered carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception for approximately 75 guests was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was centered withha three tiered wedding cake made by the groom's aunt, Mrs. Ernest Moore. The cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom with attendants. The table was flanked by lighted candleabra.

Rev. Murray proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom fittingly responded, and in turn proposed a toast to the bride's attendants to which the best man replied.

The guest book was circulated by Mrs. Artenas Lockhart, sister of the bride.

The happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to take up residence in Winnipeg, Man. Enroute they visited places of interest in N.B., Quebec, and Ontario

For travelling the bride chose a dress of crushed mint chiffon over flowered taffeta with white accessories and a corsage of pink feathered carnations. The bride is employed by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Winnipeg and the groom is a theology student at Canadian Nazarene College.

ELLEN'S DIARY

A Maple Near The Creek Changes To Autumn Dress

"We're not too badly off, as the harvesting goes" we said at breakfast this morning. "The grain on this farm has been reaped."

"The ripened fields have, Ellen" James corrected us. "There's that late-sown piece to cut yet."

But the binders have moved on to the cutting at Rob's. Not to reap any today, however, though, when at length the sun shone and a brisk wind blew. It brought the harvesters together on this farm to attend to some delayed stooking here.

Before this, interest had been centred on moving a second building from yards over the fields to this farm, for no reason other than that it would prove to be "handy about."

"Is it to be another granary?" we inquired, coming to the barnyard to inspect into arrival—and thinking of the Biblical lesson!

"Oh, it could be" James replied. "Though" he sighed "I'm afraid the way the weather's been keeping — so showery and damp, we shan't be needing it for this harvest. It's a question, whether or not, we'll be getting it saved."

"And if we don't, Gran'daddy, think of the fat stock we'll have Gage offered with a smile. "It won't be wasted — they'll pick it up! And think of the plump rabbits and 'coons! And, boy, will the wild geese come down to fatten there! To make good huntin, eh?" he chuckled to James.

"And empty granaries" James said with a twinkle.

"Was there much work to moving this?" we queried.

"No. The one tractor hauled it easily" he replied.

The harvesters stopped a minute to survey it, there in the yard. Presently "What now?" one asked turning away.

"There's that piece of stooking — let's get off to it" Jamie suggested.

"Let's have a bite to eat first" James said.

"No. We'll eat when it's done! Gather up the forks and we'll go."

Gage brought them, and prepared teasingly to check them off, into a truck.

"Do you want to see how far I can count!" he grinned to us "Then listen: one - two-three-four - five - six forks! Correct? Good?"

"Correct;" we laughed. "And good!"

Exceedingly good too it was to have a brisk wind and the sunshine over all again.

"Let's you and me go and see how many asters are in bloom, and find too the prettiest snapdragon" Alex proposed, after we had seen the harvesters on their way.

Sun there was, but there was also an edge to the wind. And "up the creek" a maple was changing to an autumn dress.

Granddaughter puts a stick on the coals. There is the crackle of burning as she draws the kettle over nearer the blaze.

"Autumn's in the air tonight" James says coming in from the stables.

"Yes" she smiles. "And to warm us, we'll have a spot of tea!"

Until tomorrow — — Diary— Good-night.....

MARY HAWORTH

Widowed Mother Makes Family's Life Difficult

Dear Mary Haworth: For six years my widowed mother has lived with us. She is the most domineering person I've ever known and the sad part is, she doesn't realize this. She tells everyone how she never interferes, when in fact she butts into everything.

We have three children: two girls, 14 and 10, and a son, 9. Mother dotes on the older girl; thinks the 10-year-old is a horror and the boy a monster. Yet all three are favorites in the neighborhood (we're new here) and on the honor lists in school.

Mother thinks all the neighborhood kids are brats. We've left two neighborhoods already, since she's lived with us, because she insulted or fought with everyone, until nobody on the block would speak to us. Now she is starting the same thing here — screaming at the kids, slamming the door on grown-ups.

She discourages callers, tells people I'm too busy to see them, never gives me telephone messages, thinks visiting is a waste of time... She is the most miserable, unhappy, hateful person I've ever been around; and it sours the children to be near her.

Another trial is money: She was working, making about $100 a week, when she moved in with us. She insisted on paying $50 a month towards expenses (we'd like to keep her for nothing, but can't). Later, when she retired on $94 a month social security income, I offered to reduce her "rent" but she declined.

Now she tells everyone she is supporting half the house, paying half the upkeep; when in fact our rent is $140 a month. And I spend fantastic amounts on food for her: $5 weekly for fruits, plus $5 at the bakery, plus special meats (she wants only steak, roast beef or chicken) — so her $50 doesn't go very far.

Is she paying such an exorbitant sum?— V.Y.

Dear V.Y.: In your recital, here's condensed, you've quoted your husband as saying, aptopos your troubles with your mother: "Do as you like and disregard her, as nothing will ever please her."

This is sensible advice, it seems to me; so why don't you try to live by it?

As of now (judging by your report) the household relationship is a nightmare. And I am obliged to think you are partly responsible for this sad state of affairs, in letting your mother steal so much authority that doesn't belong to her, and then abuse it outrageously.

Your husband's large -minded pronouncement suggests that he would champion you, when, as, and if you get up the gumption and courage to call a halt to her blind mischief- making.

You may wonder how to proceed. As I see the picture, you'll have to head her off at the pass —to borrow a phrase from Wild West movies. Instead of waiting in dread for her to cut your throat (figuratively speaking) with all the neighbors— — as she has done twice already—you should beat her to the draw. You should touch all bases first

In short, it should be your policy to get acquainted, promptly, dutifully and graciously, with the heads of all neighboring households, for the purpose of explaining sorrowfully and soberly, that you have a special cross in your family: to - wit, your mother.

Ask each neighbor to come to you immediately, in a spirit of understanding, cooperation and forbearance, in the event that your mother's peculiarities visit dismay upon them or their children. Explain that you and your husband will not take offense at such reports; on the contrary, you will do your utmost to quell the trouble at its source: namely, your mother.

Having said as much, be as good as your word. Run your household with a firm hand hereafter. Verbally haul your mother into line when she oversteps. As your guest and semi-dependent, she is properly subject to your leadership. Her $50 monthly is only token payment for room and board. If she were on her own, such food and lodging as you provide would cost her at least four times what she pays you— M.H.
