AUSTRALIAN SHIPPING TRADE.

The rapid growth of the Australian shipping trade during the last few years is largely due to the improvements effected in steam navigation, and the increased size of the steam vessels employed in both the intercolonial and over-sea business. Formerly, steam communication between Europe and Australia was maintained by a monthly branch service of the P. and O. line between Europe and India, but with the establishment of direct communication by the Orient Company a great change became effected, and at the present time, in addition to the weekly mail service effected by the alternate fortnightly sailings of the P. and O. Companies from Sydney, there are monthly services by French, German, and other boats, many being of large size, some of the German steamers being over 10,000 tons burden. There are also three lines of steamers between Sydney and Japan, and intermediate ports; another between Sydney and San Francisco, and a fifth between Sydney and Vancouver. Recently there has been increased communication between the port and those of South Africa. In addition, there are smaller services with various parts of the East. In 1890 the total shipping trade of New South Wales was 4,761,872 tons; since then it has annually increased until, in 1899, it was 6,995,551 tons, being 5.2 tons per head of population.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—The Legislature of British Columbia is now in session.

—In the language of the Montreal Gazette, the session of Parliament which has just closed has been one of the longest, most wearying and least profitable in the record.

—It is expected that Hon. A. G. Jones will receive his commission as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia this week, and will be sworn into office on Wednesday, Aug. 1. As Government House has to be renovated and painted the new Governor will not take up his residence there until the autumn. Sir Malachy B. Daly's tenure of office expires on July 28th, on which date, accompanied by Lady Daly and Miss Daly, he will leave for Chester where he will spend the summer. They will spend the winter in England.

—The huge stake that Britain has in China is forcibly revealed in the following statistics furnished by reliable authority. Of the total annual trade of China, amounting to £89,000,000 Britain's share is 63.5 per cent. Japan's share is only 51 per cent, while the United States comes third with under 10 per cent, and Russia a modest fourth with less than 5 per cent. As for the other countries who have prominently taken hands in the Chinese game, France and Germany, their trading interest in China, plus that of all other nationalities, amounts to only 10 per cent.

—A memorial bust of the late Sir John Thompson, erected by the Nova Scotia Bar Society in the county court house of Halifax in memory of the departed jurist and statesman, was unveiled on Wednesday by Lieutenant-Governor Daly, in presence of a goodly company of lawyers and friends of late Premier of Canada. In addition to members of the Nova Scotia bench and bar, the speech of the Lieutenant-Governor was a graceful tribute to the work of the departed statesman R. L. Borden, M. P., president of the Bar Society, had charge of the ceremony. Dr. B. Russell, M. P., who has just returned from Ottawa, was also present. After speeches by Chief Justice Macdonald, Archbishop O'Brien, Attorney General Loughy and R. L. Borden, M. P., the ceremonies concluded with "God Save the Queen," played by the 63rd Rifles' band.

—The St. Johns (Que) News supplies Sir Wilfrid's measure as a prohibitionist for the guidance of its temperance readers. It asks a very pertinent question and concludes with an important statement of fact, as follows: "If parliament had been asked to pass a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor in every province but Quebec, then Sir Wilfrid's argument might be held to have some force in it; but when it was simply asked to authorize every province, Quebec included, to prohibit or tolerate, as it saw fit; there was no separating fence put up, the permission was general, not particular. What is there so peculiar about the manufacture and sale of liquor that each province should not have the same control over it that it has over the licensing, over its mines, its forests, its game, its fisheries, without thereby being placed in the position of separating it from its neighbors? The fact of the matter is that the Laurier Government played with the prohibitionists for political purposes, and betrayed at the dictation of Quebec."

Montreal Gazette: The speech from the throne at the prorogation of Parliament speaks of the diligent attention the members gave to the labors of an exceptionally protracted session, and declares a belief that the legislation thereof will have important results. Perfect grammar has at times been found in speeches from the throne; now we are getting irony.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

The Admission Made by a Boer Envoy.

Mr. Robert P. Bell, the South African traveller and lecturer, relates an amusing little anecdote of a conversation he had with the first of the Boer envoys, P. Louster Wessels.

Mr. Bell had given his illustrated lecture on South Africa, "Land of the Briton and Boer," in the City Hall at Waterbury Conn., and the Boer sympathizers of that place, who hugged to their breasts the delusion that their native land was still being oppressed by England, arranged for a monster meeting to follow at which the Boer envoy and the Irish disturber Maud Gonne were to be the principal speakers. The meeting was held and attended by a mob of shouting Anglophobes at fifty cents a head. The Gonne woman confirmed the opinion of all rational people who heard her, that she had long since forfeited the usual considerations accorded her sex by her extravagant statements and utter disregard of truth and her shameful attacks on Her Majesty Queen Victoria, whom all Americans of the better class respect and honor.

She was followed by Mr. Wessels, who, besides announcing the fact that he was a Boer, a fact which anyone knowing the Boers might have doubted, as he had very much the appearance of a gentleman, gave what purported to be a brief history of the English and Dutch occupation of South Africa, laying particular stress on the excellent native policy pursued by the Boer States.

At the conclusion of the demonstration the promoters had arranged for a meeting between Mr. Wessels and Mr. Bell, at which time they confidently expected to enjoy the latter's complete discomfiture, when the envoy, with his mighty weapons, Truth and Right, would completely rebut any derogatory statements concerning the Boers, which had been made by the American.

The argument between the two gentlemen continued for some time and occasionally waxed exceedingly warm, the Boer who was a Free Stater exhibiting very little knowledge of the Transvaal.

At length, after Mr. Bell had called the envoy's attention repeatedly to the articles of the convention of 1884 and urged that the principal stipulation made therein by Great Britain was in substance "Equal Rights for All" in the Transvaal, and Mr. Wessels had replied that such condition had been complied with, the American said: "Mr. Wessels, as you know, I am an American and represented large French interests in the Transvaal, and if when I first entered the country, the laws as to franchise had been reasonable, it would have been to my advantage to become a burgher and settle among the Boers; but, as you are aware at that time it would have been necessary for me to first forewear allegiance to my own government and then remain in a probationary state for 14 years, during which I would have to maintain a residence in the South African Republic, and after that I would be given but a partial franchise."

The Boer mused a moment, and then replied: "Let me see—you are an American and you are representing French interests? Well, why did you not make those facts known and we would have made you a citizen at once?" Still the Boers contend that all men were treated fairly and alike in the Transvaal and no favoritism was shown.

Mrs. Gladstone.

T. P. O'Connor writes in "M. A. P.": "To every member of Parliament Mrs. Gladstone was familiar. She always occupied the same place, the corner seat in that part of the ladies' gallery which is at the disposal of the wife of the Speaker, or his daughter if he has no wife. Her presence there was as certain a proof that her husband was going to make a great speech as the cradle of Henry of Navarre was to his troops during battle. She seemed to be almost part of the House itself; she leaned forward so as to catch every word, and was so palpably interested in her husband and so anxious that she seemed almost part of himself."

"It was her old-fashioned idea that the wife should always be in the gallery to encourage the husband in the greater moments of his career. Once a friend of mine had to make a speech of some length and some perplexity during the big home-rule struggle, and his wife had got a place to near him. There was some difficulty in getting to the front row, as the gallery was crowded. Mrs. Gladstone turned round and said: 'Why, it's his wife!' and said no more. That seemed to her a sufficient and unanswerable claim to any place the lady might like to have."

"Mrs. Gladstone was even more at home when her husband and she were on the platform together. Indeed, the presence of the one would have seemed insufficient without that of the other. She always sat immediately behind her husband, and now and then she took advantage of a pause created by the cheers to give him a hint, or utter a gentle remonstrance."

An Old Structure.

The farmhouse built by General Henry Knox at Thomaston, Maine, in 1794, is now the Thomaston depot of the Maine Central Railway. It has not been modernized but is exactly the same as it was when General Knox died in 1806, with the exception of one small window which was needed and has been set into one of the walls. A Bangor paper says it is one of the oldest buildings in the United States. There are several, it is said, that are quite as old in this province and in Nova Scotia.
