THE DAILY EXAMINER.

OCTOBER 21, 1891.

Notes and Comments.

—One of the things most desirable to be seen manifested by man, woman and child is self-respect. Whoever possesses respect for himself is sure to have respect for others, and this is one of the accomplishment that should be taught children from their earliest infancy.

—The terms of the following lieutenant-governors expire next year, reckoning five years from the dates of appointment:

Lieut.-Gov. Campbell, Ontario....May 31
" Angers, Quebec.....Oct. 10
" Nelson, B. Columbia.....Feb. 7

Lieut.-Governor Tilley's term expired in November last, but he still retains the office during the pleasure of the Governor-General.

—"Old Hutch" has undertaken a new role, that of a "littery feller," and blooms out in the North American Review in an attempt to justify speculation in wheat. According to him the speculator is a benefactor of mankind, a blessing to producer and consumer, and himself the greatest sufferer from the vicissitudes of the market. "Old Hutch" has been through it all and ought to know, but we doubt if the public will recognize in him a martyr to the cause of humanity.

—"Seven years ago," says Col. Vincent, the British M. P. who recently visited Canada, "I saw much of the Dominion. But since then the progress has been immense. On every side, from Halifax to Vancouver, you see increasing evidences of prosperity. You see tall chimneys belching forth black smoke, which were not here seven years ago. You see factories everywhere in full swing. In the railway train, on the steamboat, in the hotel and on the streets, you rarely see articles not of Canadian make. You see placards up everywhere, 'Men wanted,' 'Laborers wanted.'

—Though the project of a cable between our Pacific coast and Australia hangs fire for the moment, its promoters will be assisted in their labors by a survey which is shortly to be undertaken by the United States steamer Albatross to look over the route for a possible cable between San Francisco and the Sandwich Islands. Congress appropriated $25,000 for the survey, but declined to sanction a subsidy of $3,000,000 for the scheme itself. The Albatross, however, in making the survey, will do good service for the British-Canadian project, which likewise contemplates the route by way of Honolulu. The New York Times thinks that "the conviction is irresistible that sooner or later a Pacific cable will be laid."

—Prof. Robertson, of the Experimental Farm, has arrived at Ottawa from his trip through the eastern provinces. While away he completed arrangements for a shipment to the British markets of about $2,000 worth of dairy products from the maritime provinces. Many people in England, he said, are of the opinion that the only products from New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and P. E. Island are coal and lumber, and the object of this shipment is to convince them differently, and to attract immigrants of a good class. He said that the potato crop in the eastern provinces was exceptionally fine this year, in fact the finest for ten years. The Professor will leave for western Ontario to finish arrangements for more shipments and to purchase cattle for feeding experiments on the farm during the winter.

—Concerning the Right Hon. W. S. Smith, the Week says: "With regard to the dead leader himself, it may be said that, while all admit his mediocrity in talent, and most are willing to give him credit for tact, temper, and good judgment, it is doubtful whether the critics are not losing sight of one of the chief elements in the very fair measure of success which he achieved. We refer to his sterling integrity. Mr. Smith was strongly entrenched in his respectability; we use that word in a good sense His character compelled a respect, and carried a power which not even brilliant talents, if divorced from unexceptionable morals, can always command. If we are not mistaken, his career conveys a lesson on the influence of high principle as a potent factor in the achievement of success, even in political life. The lesson is one which it might be worth while for young politicians in Canada to study just now with the closest attention.

—Nicholas Flood Davin writes to The Week:—"If men's difficulties are the measure of their opportunities, the opportunities of Mr. Abbott are great; and yet he is to-day in a much better position than anybody could have anticipated when he took the reins. The wheels have indeed gone into ruts not looked for, and an outrider has been unhorsed, but the team has behaved beautifully. No one, friend or foe, believed that after the death of Sir John Macdonald the party in the House and the country would show the organic life, the self-conscious direction, it has done. It may be said in passing, however, that twelve months before his death, when some newspapers were echoing the flim-flam—"after me the deluge"—the present writer declared, in a published article, that his demise would not be the signal for his following going to pieces, and pointed out that the Conservative party was a party and not a faction or a mob. . . . . Looking at the fact that on every ground, personal and patriotic, Mr. Abbott must desire to give Canada the strongest government he possibly can, and bearing in mind the impression of statesman-like capacity he has given all who came in contact with him since he became Premier, we await with some confidence the re-organization to which the Conservative party looks forward with expectancy, and the whole country with a curiosity not unmingled with unrest.

—If conducted properly, there is more money in raising horses than there is in raising any other kind of stock, but if not conducted properly and economically more money can be lost in a given length of time in this than in any other branch of the live stock industry. One of the main causes of loss is ably set forth in the following: "The man who would persistently refuse to take the market price for his grain, but hold it over from year to year in the hope of something to turn up, with taxes of storage and insurance on it, would be regarded as nothing short of a fool in any community. But little is said of the man who does even worse with his horses. This man becomes so attached to his animals, and sees so many points of excellence in them that others fail to discover, that he repeatedly refuses fair offers, and keeps horses for which he has little or no use, which eat up all the profits which they should have brought and more too, on which he has to pay taxes, take the risk of their being lessened in value by injury or lost by death, and which are taking the feed and care that should be given to young stock growing into money. The men who are most successful with horses are those who like them, it is true, but they raise horses to sell, and when they can get a fair price for an animal they let him go, and devote their energy and means to raising a better one."

Watching Russia Closely.

Something of a sensation has been created in political circles in Europe by the publication in the London Standard of a vigorous and somewhat inflammatory article on Russian aggression in Central Asia. The article is based on alleged Russian movements on the borders of Afghanistan, concerning which some sensational announcements have appeared in the cable despatches recently. There can be no doubt that Russian movements in that direction are being closely watched by Great Britain, and that the Government of India has taken steps to checkmate any aggressive action taken by the Russians. The sensational article published in the Standard is written from Bombay and its author is supposed to be a person of importance whose utterances reflect the views of his civil and military advisers. He points out that the presence of the Russian in Pamir, is tantamount to the annexation of 22,000 square miles of Chinese territory and 10,000 square miles of Afghan territory. More than this the British "have the stupendous audacity to order two British officers off the ground belonging to a neutral power. The time has come," he says "long though it has procrastinated, when the supremacy of England in Asia must be, once and all, so firmly established that the tide which has flowed so steadily eastward throughout the last fifty years may not only be checked, but sent sweeping back to the Caspian. We have in Lord Salisbury a Foreign Minister imbued with the highest traits of the national character—bold, brave and just. We have a navy the envy of the world. We have in India an army vastly superior in numbers, quality and organization to any that Russia can bring against us, under command of, and thoroughly devoted to one of the ablest generals of the day. We may never hit upon such a fortunate era again."

These are vigorous utterances, and the fact that they appear in The Standard, with all paraphenalia of sensational head-lines, adds something to their significance. So far, however, they do not appear to have awakened any war fever or excitement in England. The Queen is at Balmoral and Lord Salisbury remained at Riviers, though this can hardly be construed as a peaceful sign, inasmuch as the Queen and Prime Minister are in constant communication with each other by messenger and by wire. The one thing that is clear is that Great Britain is closely watching Russian movements both in Central Asia and Eastern Europe and appears to be amply prepared to meet them.

Of Interest to Writers.

A LABOR SAVING INVENTION INDISPENSABLE TO ALL WHO WRITE.

Of the many valuable improvements which have been made in self-feeding pens, a great part are due to the skill and persistence of Mr. L. E. Dunlap, of Boston, who, as a pioneer in this business, has spent the last decade in perfecting the fountain pen that bears his name. The latest perfected invention is the Dunlap Double-feed Pen, and in this very double-feed lies the secret of its success.

It carries a sixteen-karat diamond-pointed gold pen, and is a perfect pocket-companion that will not only prove indispensable, but a joy and blessing as long as life lasts. It is guaranteed to write instantly, always and under all circumstances. To introduce it among the readers of this paper, the manufacturers offer for a short time only, to send it by return mail at one-half the regular price.

By posting a letter, enclosing a two-cent stamp, to the Dunlap Pen Company, 280 Washington street, Boston, Mass., you will receive a beautifully engraved ticket worth $2, and also an illustrated price-list and circular, telling you how to make $5 a day.
