

THE DAILY EXAMINER. OCTOBER 13, 1888.

Editorial Notes.

The price of wheat in Chicago is on the down grade. Canada sold in the United States last year $424 worth of Cheese; and in Great Britain $7,065,000.

The latest shipment of Alberta cattle to Liverpool was quite successful, the mortality amounting to only 3 per cent; and the ranch company are confident that they will find a profitable market in Great Britain.

It is the opinion of Senator Ingalls that the United States ought to take in everything betwixt the north pole and the equator at once, and ultimately the whole hemisphere. In fact, it wouldn't be much of an exaggeration to say that Ingalls really wants the earth.

Charles B. Waite, formerly a Supreme Court Judge of the United States, will publish in the October issue of the Law Times a statement that the common law entitles women to vote in that country; that women were voters in all the original American States, and that the statutes which have excluded women from voting are mostly unconstitutional and invalid.

The Boston Herald of the 9th inst. has an article headed, "The Tendency of the Times," in the course of which it says: "A calm and unemotional view of the present condition of affairs will convince intelligent Americans that the trouble which the churches of this country, and the Roman Catholic no less than the others, have to contend with, is not the transfer of believers from one sect to another, but the gradual disintegration of all of the old forms of religious faith."

The Empire remarks that while Mr. Winton has been pretending that Commercial Union is making great headway in the United States, Senator Sherman informs him that there is a poor prospect for anything of the kind, and Mr. Winton distinctly states that if Canada wish the use of United States markets, they must become United States citizens.

The Democratic party's fiscal policy is embodied in the Mills Tariff Bill, now before Congress, which, if passed, would admit some Canadian products free, but so far from admitting all free, it keeps up a high duty on most of them.

The Acadia whistles farewell this morning, and finally ploughs the waters for Halifax, to return no more this year. She is the Admiral ship of the Canadian fisheries protection fleet, and is very handsomely gotten up.

The assessors of our town deserve praise for placing down some new sidewalks. They will receive more thanks—when there is more mud.

Blackbird and Sussex Lass trot on Moosepath Park, St. John, this afternoon, for a purse of $200. The race is expected to be one of the finest trotting events that ever took place on the Park.

J. C. Shulz, of the Parkville Stock Farm, at Long Island, N. Y., will drive his pacing wonder Arrow (2:13) on the road this winter double with King Jim (2:20) by Belmont.

The stallion Pancoast is improving nicely from his lightning stroke. He goes to the halter without any trouble, and begins to show his old time vim and resolution.

A Wild Night at Souris.

FITCHED BATTLE BETWEEN SAILORS AND CITIZENS—STICKS AND STONES FREELY USED—ONE MAN DIES AND SEVERAL ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED—THE MEN ARRESTED—THE INQUEST.

They had a wild time in Souris last night. Between eight and nine o'clock, as Mr. Joseph Doyle, a well-known merchant of that place, was passing along Main Street, he was assaulted by a party of some eight or ten drunken fishermen belonging to the American schooner Orient, commanded by Captain Charles Lee.

By this time quite a number of people had gathered, and the fight became general, sticks, axe-handles, etc., being freely used on both sides. After a short struggle, and the ranks of the citizens had been increased by the arrival of reinforcements, the blood-thirsty sailors discovered that they were getting the worst of the encounter, and beat an inglorious retreat down Main Street to Morrow's corner.

The crowd of citizens, who were by this time pretty well worked up over the affair, followed the retreating sailors as fast as they could, and succeeded in capturing several of them and putting them in the lock-up, where they were confined all night. One of the sailors, a man named Stockles, belonging to Guysboro, N. S., fell or got struck in the head and was knocked over the bank near Morrow's store, falling a distance of between forty and fifty feet.

In the pockets of the sailors arrested were found a number of granite stones which look as though the raid upon the people were premeditated. The remainder of the attacking party made their escape.

Our Souris correspondent telegraphs as follows this afternoon: The names of the sailors arrested are Neil McNeill, John Melsaac, William Brewer, Hugh Gillis, Angus Melsaac and John Morrison. They were arraigned in the Magistrate's court this forenoon, and Neil McNeill, William Brewer, Hugh Gillis and Angus Melsaac were fined $50 each or four months' imprisonment.

The inquest on the body of the unfortunate sailor Stockles is still in progress. The evidence taken thereat will appear in THE EXAMINER on Monday.

Messrs. Doyle, Dunphy and the others attacked by the sailors are not very seriously injured.

Personal.

Rev. W. M. Tufts has taken charge of the congregation of Bedeque.

The Dean of Winchester and many other members of the English clergy have contributed to a fund for the relief of evicted families in Ireland.

Mr. Henry Dickie will be ordained and inducted into the pastoral charge of the Presbyterian Church at Summerside on Friday Nov. 6, at 7.30 p. m.

Mr. Parnell requests any persons who received letters from him during 1881 and 1882, to send them to his secretary for use before the commission of inquiry.

A newly married Aroostook pair return thanks for their many elegant presents, in a card signed by them and published in the local newspaper. This is real gratitude.

Charles Kingsley said: Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation; do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them.

William Joy once remarked: "Man originally fell by losing his confidence in God, and can only be raised by the restoration of his confidence. In other words, unbelief was his ruin, and he now stands by faith."

Rev. Charles Stephen will preach in the Presbyterian Church at Summerside to-morrow; and Rev. William Scott will preach here on the 21st and 28th. Rev. Charles Stephen will preach at West Cape on the 21st and 28th.

At the annual meeting of St. Andrew's Society in Toronto, a few nights ago, it was decided, amidst the greatest enthusiasm, to erect a statue to Robbie Burns in that city. The necessary funds were promised three times over.

General Sherman's peculiar humor was illustrated the other day when, commenting upon the rapidity with which the veterans are passing away, he said he must hurry up and die or else there would be nobody left to bury him but militia.

Daniel Webster is credited with the following: "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something that will brighten to all eternity."

An individual who is described as "George Edward Gascoigne Hawkes, 25, a solicitor's clerk," was up before a London, England, magistrate, charged with kissing a girl named Alice Farrell against her will in a railway carriage. The girl, a waitress, got into the same compartment along with Hawkes, and he at once assaulted her in the way described.

The British Museum, which contains 89,000 manuscripts, and about 900,000 volumes (some 40,000 additions are made annually).

The Imperiale, France, about 600,000 books, 600,000 pamphlets, and 85,000 manuscripts.

The Vatican, about 150,000 books and 40,000 manuscripts.

The Imperial, of Russia, about 600,000 books and 21,000 manuscripts.

Varia.

The publication of the Emperor Frederick's diary has been the absorbing topic of the week in foreign politics. It is interesting, not only as giving us new light on the Franco-German war and the other events of 1870, but also as enabling the outsider to see something more of the writer's character than was public property before.

In spite of his Imperialistic tendencies, Frederick III. was, in the truest sense of the word, liberal. He understood the art of governing; he knew that men could be led whither they would not be driven, but that a conciliatory policy must be free from the suspicion of weakness.

The death of Marshal Bazaine at the time when all Europe was discussing the Emperor Frederick's diary reminds us, that one who was probably a better general than the Crown Prince has gone down to his grave unlamented, while the other's death cannot be sufficiently deplored.

In the North and South of Africa the news is peaceful. The Sultan has vanquished his rebels in Morocco; and in Zululand Dinuzulu has surrendered—though to the Transvaal authorities in preference to the British. The Volksraad of the Orange Free State—which was wisely governed by the late Sir J. H. Brand, in friendly co-operation with his British neighbors—has nominated the Chief Justice Reitz as a candidate for the vacant Presidency.

From India no more news has come, either of the Sekkim or the Black Mountain Expedition. Further away on the Russo-Afghan frontier it would seem that important events are impending. Ishak Khan has been defeated in what is called a battle, but is probably only an affair of outposts; but he is surrounded by three armies of the Ameer, which are gradually closing in upon him, and we may expect to hear soon of a decisive engagement.

I am asked by a correspondent what were the most famous libraries in the world? I am not sure whether I can give a complete list, but the following are the best known among the ancients:—

The Ptolemies, of Alexandria, formed by the Ptolemies, and destroyed by the Arabs A. D. 641.

The first public library of Rome was founded by Asinius Polio; the second, called the Palatine, by Augustus.

The Royal Library of the Fatimites of Egypt contained 100,000 manuscripts splendidly bound.—Gibbon.

The library of the Omniades of Spain contained 600,000 volumes, 44 of which were catalogues.—Gibbon.

There were seventy public libraries in the Kingdom of Andalusia.—Gibbon.

When the Monastery of Crocydon was burnt in 1091, its library consisted of 900 volumes, 300 of which were very large.—Ingulphus.

Among the modern libraries those accounted the best are:—

The British Museum, which contains 89,000 manuscripts, and about 900,000 volumes (some 40,000 additions are made annually).

The Imperiale, France, about 600,000 books, 600,000 pamphlets, and 85,000 manuscripts.

The Vatican, about 150,000 books and 40,000 manuscripts.
