HAPPY EFFECTS OF FILIAL PIETY.

IN a great sea port town, in one of the most distant provinces in France, there lived a merchant, who had carried on trade with equal honour and prosperity, until he was turned of fifty years of age, and then by a sudden series of unexpected and unavoidable losses, found himself unable to comply with his engagements, and his wife and children, in whom he placed his principal happiness, reduced to such a situation as doubled his distress.

His sole resource in this sad situation was the reflection, that upon the strictest review of his own conduct, nothing either of iniquity or imprudence appeared. He thought it best therefore to repair to Paris, in order to lay a true state of his affairs before his creditors, that being convinced of his honesty, they might be induced to pity his misfortunes, and allow him a reasonable space of time to settle his affairs. He was very kindly received by some, and very civilly by all; from whence he conceived great hopes, and communicated to his family the flattering expectations. But these were speedily dashed by the cruelty of his principal creditor, who caused him to be seized, and sent to gaol.

As soon as this melancholly event was known in the country, his eldest son who was turned of nineteen, listening only to the dictates of filial piety, came post to Paris, and threw himself at the feet of the obdurate creditor, but without effect. At length, in the greatest agony of mind, he said, "Sir, since you think nothing can compensate for your loss, but a victim, let your resentment devolve upon me—let me suffer instead of my father, and the miseries of a prison will seem light in procuring the liberty of a parent, to console the sorrows of the distracted and dejected family that I have left behind me. Thus, Sir, you will satisfy your vengeance, without sealing their irrevocable ruin!" And here his tears and sighs stopped his utterance.

His father's creditor beheld him on his knees in this condition for a full quarter of an hour. He then sternly bid him rise and sit down, which he obeyed. The gentleman then walked from one corner of the room to the other, in great agitation of mind, for about the same space of time. At length throwing his arms about the young man's neck, "I find, said he, there is yet something more valuable than money. I have an only daughter, for whose fate I have the utmost anxiety. I am resolved to fix it;—in marrying you she must be happy. Go, carry your father's discharge, ask his consent, bring him instantly hither, and let us, in the joy of this alliance, bury all remembrance of what has formerly happened." Thus, the gentle
