Pan American Team Seeks Panama Peace

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A Pan American fact-finding team went to work Wednesday to see what can be done about calling off the small invasion of Panama by outlawed revolutionary adventurers from Cuba.

There were no reports of any new action between Panama's military forces and the band of invaders that landed on the Caribbean coast last weekend. Nor was there any word on reports that more insurgents are on their way to Panama beachheads.

The five-man committee from the 21-member Organization of American States began its efforts after two Cuban officers on a peace mission failed to negotiate a surrender with the invaders. Most of them are Cuban.

Spokesmen for President Ernesto de la Guardia's government said Panama is leaving the situation in the hands of the OAS.

QUESTION INVADERS
Shortly after their arrival, the five OAS diplomats conferred with Panamanian officials and then questioned four members of the invasion force. Three of the invaders were captured and the fourth defeated.

Scotia
(Continued from page 1 of knowledge or a lack of proper appreciation of the problem we are facing. It would seem that the matter of continuous service under the terms of Confederation is not being taken too seriously," he said.

"Until a decision is reached to build a causeway or to construct an ice breaking ferry, the answer seems to me to be 'The Vacationland'," said Mr. MacKay.

The minister said Premier Matheson was quite worried about the transportation situation at Borden. He understood the premier was having a number of meetings in Ottawa this week concerning an additional ferry.
