Lutz - Noonan Wedding

The St. Peter's Church at Seven Mile Bay was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 6th at 8 a.m. when Agnes Pearl Noonan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Noonan of Carleton exchanged marriage vows with Malcolm Lutz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ovid Lutz of Moncton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Reginald MacDonald, P.P., who also celebrated the Nuptial Mass, and the wedding music was under the direction of Mr. Robert Sylvere of Quebec.

The bride looked very lovely in a floor-length wedding gown of white satin. She wore a fingertip veil and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses. Miss Irene Hughes was her sister's bridesmaid and wore a floor-length dress of pink brocaded sheer and shoulder-length veil. She carried a bouquet of beautiful mixed flowers. Mr. Aeneas McEntee, cousin of the groom, was best man. Little Doreen Mallett, niece of the groom, made a very charming flower girl dressed in a floor-length white satin gown similar to the bride's, with long white veil. She carried a basket of mixed flowers.

White - McInnis Wedding

The Holy Family Church, Toronto, Ontario, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 10 A. M. on Saturday, July 21st, when Rev. Father Breen united in the bonds of Holy Matrimony Nan Johanna, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John J. McInnis, Summerside and Joseph Raymond White, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. White, Emerald. Given in marriage by her brother John J. McInnis, the bride looked charming in a floor length gown of white French lace and net. The bodice featured a Peter Pan collar, lily point sleeves and a row of seed buttons extended down the front to waistline. The bouffant skirt featured a peplum of French lace and fell to a short train.

Following the reception the happy young couple left for a short honeymoon trip. On return they will reside in Toronto. For travelling the bride chose a powder blue gabardine suit with white accessories and carried a white topper. Her corsage was of gardenias. Mrs. White is a graduate of the Charlottetown Hospital School of Nursing. Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Major Inman-Boden; Mrs. John J. White-Emerald; Mrs. D. F. McLaughlin-Montreal; Miss Ruth Jay-Borden; Miss Audrey Clow - Summerside; Miss Mildred Greenan-Emerald; Mrs. Laura McLaughlin-Montreal; Mrs. J. A. Morrison - Guelph, Ont.

(Conclusion)

There was a silence, then Burleson's voice. "My wife's dead; the boys, too; that's all there is to it. Of course the others—" "Yes, the others!" barked Fosdick, starting hard at Mark's back; of course it was a vindication, but this man—had stood so high! Burleson touched the paper on his desk. "You'll put it through. Fosdick? I'm tired of it; I'll take it when it comes. Now—" He turned, too, and glanced at the young man at the window—"you can both leave; I've done my share." Fosdick rose; he was white and his eyes stared, but he took the paper. "It'll mean a trial," he said harshly; "I'll have to drag you into court." Burleson, who had sunk lower in his chair, nodded. "Make it as clear as you can—if I'm to go to jail—" he laughed discordantly, turning to Mark. "Young man, you're avenged; it's harder for me to go to jail for two years now—and to die there—than it was for you. You've got your life before you—I'm done!" "He doesn't count that," said Fosdick dryly; it's revenge that's sweet, Burleson." He was tucking the confession into his breast pocket, but the motionless figure in the window rasped on him. "You'll be needed, too, Grant," he said sharply. "I'll have to ask your pardon for my treatment of you; they'll make everything right in court now—and you can have it put in the papers. Suddenly Burleson groaned. The hideous publicity of it made him wince. He seemed to hear already the strident calls of the newsboys—"Extry!" Mark turned. There was a light in his face; he held his head high. "Wait," he said to Fosdick; "one moment! Keep that paper. I've had fifteen years—I can afford to wait two more." Fosdick gazed at him and Burleson lifted his head slowly. "You mean—" he gasped Fosdick. "I mean just that! I'll wait. I can't strike such a blow at them all, nor at—" Mark stopped. He did not want to add "a dying man". Burleson rose unsteadily, facing him. "You—you know I let you suffer? And you do this?" Mark nodded. "I'll wait." Burleson sank into his chair, speechless; speechless he hid his face in his hands. Fosdick stood staring, reluctant to be convinced. "Here's a wonder!" he exclaimed at last. "Fam, when she was told, saw it all more clearly. "Of course I understand! I knew you'd be like that," she said proudly; "you're great enough to spare an old man who's wronged you! It's awfully grand, and I know it's for me. You can't see now, Mark Grant, for I was some of that glory; we'll see those ex-convict years together, yes, we will!" (THE END)
