Odd Fellows And Rebekahs Held A Memorial Service

On Tuesday evening Odd Fellows and Rebekahs assembled in their lodge room on Sydney St. to again honor the memory of those members of their great fraternity who have departed from this life.

Opening remarks were made by the chairman, Mr. A.O.F. Gill, P.G.M. and prayer was offered by Mr. Arthur Coffin.

The following Odd Fellows and Rebekah answered the last roll call during the past year: Mr. E.T. Higgs, P.G., Mr. John T. Martin, P.G. and Mr. G.D. DeBlois, of St. Lawrence Lodge; Mr. Alfred Pickard, P.G. and Mr. Herbert Platts, of Wilsey Lodge; and Mrs. Dorenda MacEwen, Alpha Rebekah Lodge.

One minute's silence was observed and a beautiful and impressive memorial ceremony presented in commemoration of the memory of departed members. Mr. John MacLeod sang the lovely old hymn "The Old Rugged Cross" as the floral tributes were placed by Mrs. Hazel Lea, Noble Grand of Alpha Rebekah Lodge, Mr. Peter Shama, Noble Grand of Wilsey Lodge and Mr. Menton Whitlock, P.D.D.G.M. of St. Lawrence Lodge. Appropriate hymns were rendered during the ceremony by Mrs. Lena Acorn and Mrs. Bessie Comton.

Prayer was offered by Senior Major A. Hicks, of the Salvation Army, and Mrs. Ruby Houle, P.P.R.A. very fittingly read the poem by Longfellow "Into The Silent Land".

Senior Major Hicks was the honored speaker for the evening and took as his text Eccles. Chap. 4, Verse 12 "A three fold cord is not quickly broken", to which he likened the Three Links "Friendship, Love and Truth".

He said "In Friendship, Love and Truth we have a three fold cord which cannot be broken, the links Friendship and Truth being bonded together by the link of Love." He also earnestly asked that Odd Fellows and Rebekahs live up to the ideals and teachings of the Order and to carry on the good work laid down by departed members.

Mrs. Lois Crockett presided at the piano during the service.

MARY HAWORTH

Married Over 20 Years But She's Not In Love

Dear Mary Haworth: More than 20 years ago I married a fine man who has since risen to the top in his profession. I was never aggressive in trying to date many men, and when John proposed, he seemed ideal, except that I was afraid I wasn't "in love."

But after some reading and consultation, I was persuaded that marriage for us should work out well, as I was deeply fond of him and we had so much in common. Also, I had read that being "in love" is an untrustworthy basis for marriage, as the feeling often wears off or is greatly diminished later.

Temperamentally, John and I are different. He is more extroverted, and I am more introverted, inclined to be a loner. I have never been able to feel the "psychic unity" with him that comes of ready sharing of mood or thought — although I have met others with whom such communication is easy; so I assume it is a matter of innate disposition.

Wilfred Lay in his book A Plea for Monogamy asserts that the great need in modern marriage is for husbands who will really marry their wives psychically instead of leaving them "psychic virgins," thereby remaining psychic virgins too.

So much for background. SECRET SUSPENSE Less than a year ago a number of events precipitated my falling in love with a man I have known for more than 10 years — socially and professionally, as an associate of my husband's. I have good reason to believe that Mr. X (I'll call him) feels similarly and might like to discuss it frankly, but this I've sidestepped.

However, neither avoidance nor social encounters has reduced the mutual tension. A sense of psychic unity having developed (imperceptibly), the sound of his voice, a meeting of our eyes, or his presence in a room, is very disturbing to me. I can't do much to change the pattern of our lives, so all the adjustment has to come from within.

Should I talk over this matter frankly with Mr. X if he opens the subject? Or pretend that all is well, hoping the tension will fade eventually? Meantime, what can I do to fall in love with my husband? He has never been aware of my problem, so far as I know. — R. M.

Dear R. M.: It seems you are being absurdly coy, in your introvert way, about the feeling of intense mutuality that has developed between you and Mr. X. There would be less tension, and greater moral security, in the situation, when your paths cross, if you had the poise and good sense to manifest real friendly interest in the man — expressed in terms of mellow respectful affection (based on 10 years' acquaintance), conversational exploration of his thoughts on current events, and the like.

Marriage is one thing; it is a way of life, also a central commitment of the soul: the primary relationship between man and wife, to be honored as such, "for better, for worse." Friendships are something else — even the greatest and finest. But they aren't to be shunned by married persons. They should be valued and enjoyed, as part of the worth and variety that each partner may bring to marriage.

SHY CHILD ROLE Man or wife is more of a person in marriage, a richer more rewarding associate in intimacy, in proportion as he, or she, rightly cares about others also, in a reciprocally appreciative spirit — and shares this fund of "being" with the spouse.

Both as a wife, and a person in the social arena, you are blocked by immaturity attitudes. I gather, you need education in coming of age, emotionally, and breaking out of your shy child role. If you could act your age and be yourself, you'd be in love with your husband, no doubt — and unafraid of friendship with Mr. X.

You would profit by first-hand psychological steering. Meanwhile no confessional dramatics with Mr. X — M.H.

a wedding gown of white lace. She carried a bouquet of roses. The bride's two attendants were Mrs. Leonard Arsenault as matron of honor and Miss Margaret Perry as bridesmaid. Both wore identical waltz length gowns of pink and green lace with hats to match and a nosegay of roses.

The bride's table was centered with a three-decker wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

For a honeymoon trip the bride wore a gray suit, white hat and accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Burke will reside in Ch'Town where the groom is employed at the M.C.A.
