

Only 1 T.V. Outlet Allowed In Area

OTTAWA (CP)—Revenue Minister Nowlan said Tuesday there will be no change "for some little time yet" in the government's policy of licensing only one television station in any one area.

Mr. Nowlan said in the Commons that any change will come only after passage of legislation, which he hopes to introduce as soon as possible this session, and after a new regulatory body is set up and broadcasting regulations drawn up.

He spoke at the close of a debate on a Liberal opposition motion of non-confidence expressing regret that the government has not yet disclosed its proposals to dispel uncertainties surrounding public and private broadcasting. The CCF proposed an amendment criticizing the government for not announcing its intention to maintain and expand the CBC's radio and TV facilities.

Mr. Nowlan, who reports to Parliament for the CBC, said there is no doubt the Progressive Conservative government wants to maintain the CBC. If it did not, it would not deserve the public's confidence and any government that did not support the CBC would be "politically stupid."

AMENDMENT DEFEATED
The CCF amendment was defeated by a vote of 159 to 44, and Speaker Roland Michener ruled that the main motion of non-confidence proposed by the Liberal party also was lost, without a formal roll-call vote.

The new board would take over the regulatory powers of the CBC board of governors. The legislation, forecast in the throne speech, has not been introduced and Mr. Nowlan declined to outline its provisions now.

He said the regulatory system to be proposed will not depend on hard-and-fast rules, but on men appointed to the board, personnel, common sense and good will.

Mr. Nowlan came out strongly in favor of the present system of a national broadcasting system combining the publicly-owned CBC and private enterprise as the best means of serving Canadians.

He was asked whether the government intends to appoint a successor to A. D. Dunton, chairman of the CBC board of governors whose resignation to become president of Carleton University lingate) that the appointment will depend on the circumstances. It might or might not be necessary to appoint a successor, depending on how soon the legislation is passed.

Mr. Pickersgill earlier urged that the government leave the CBC "as independent of the government as is the judiciary."
