St. Dunstan's Graduate Wed At St. John's, P.Q.

The wedding of Christine MacPherson, daughter of the late Hugh Ross Rutherford, and of Mrs. Rutherford, of Ottawa to Mr. Charles Barrett Gorman of St. John's, Quebec, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gorman, of Kensington, P.E.I. took place recently in St. Theresa's Chapel, R.C.A.F. Station, St. John's.

YMCA Is The Setting For A Successful Tea

The annual Sleepytime Tea and Bazaar was held last Saturday at the Y.M.C.A. and was a most successful affair. The girls serving wore colorful and dainty pyjamas.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

We Are Showing Signs Of Humanity In Some Ways

By Ruhamal S. Frank

An Island friend has just returned from a week's visit to a large city in the United States. She loved every minute of the trip — her first away from the Maritimes. Those of you who find long train rides boring or tiring or both should have heard her glowing accounts—the change in view from the window—and the different people she met—and all so friendly! The city itself was a revelation — its wide clean streets; the dazzling shops, and the large hotel where she stayed seemed a glittering city within the city. You could find everything there! Splendid restaurants and modest ones; shops of every description—and such beauty parlors! She was delighted but prepared for all this.

COSY AND SOFT

The snowman, so popular with lots, now delights them on knitted slippers, so cosy and soft. A Christmas surprise. Jiffy knit that costs so little. Pattern 7232: chart, directions, child's sizes 4 to 12 included in pattern.

ELI EN'S DIARY

Read About Sleigh-Ride, Schooling, Xmas Cacti

This morning, for our children to reach the old school down the River Road, meant a sleigh-ride behind Rex, the brown horse. Seated on a bale of straw, on the only sleigh available—a stout woodsleigh of the farm—and snugly wrapped against the nipping December wind, they set forth obviously well pleased with the turn of weather which had made the magic ride possible.

We saw James stand a moment in the yard, watching them go, smile a bit wistful for years that were gone. From a window of the house across the lane, Jeanie and Alex, the baby waved to them.

MARY HAWORTH

Sarcasm Cheap And Easy Way Of Sounding Smart

Dear Mary Haworth—On the surface, my problem seems insignificant, yet I feel that it might wreck my marriage gradually, and cause the loss of some of my friends.

I come from a well-educated, well-to-do European family. My father advanced to the top, in the field of work he chose. And my husband, a fine young American of British ancestry, is a professional man. He comes of a very fine sophisticated family.

My parents were my best friends and always encouraged me and helped me with my problems. I don't think was spoiled as a child. They scolded me plenty of times, but in a friendly sort of way. I don't remember that we ever used sarcasm as a means of driving a point.

My husband and I are both of us, I feel, very heavy sarcasm to my head, and then I say the first cutting thing that comes to mind. Two minutes later I am sorry and try to make up for it.

How can I learn to react with poise to sarcastic remarks? My husband, being of English origin, doesn't like people who can't control their emotions.

Please advise me. I love everything here and don't want to ruin our happiness. I also don't want to consult my parents because they would worry, thinking I am unhappy. Many thanks in advance. N. K.

Sarcasm is simply a cheap and easy way of sounding smart, at the expense of good taste and fine feeling. In the scale of intellectual prowess, it is on a par with the pun, damned as "the lowest form of wit."

In view of these self-evident truths, I've sometimes wondered why the English, in so many ways such admirable people, have for so long subscribed to craven rudeness in conversation, amongst their peers or in squelching an upstart, as a supposed hallmark of aristocratic breeding.

Not that all civilized English behave that way, thank God. But them each morning around a woody bend of way.

On the morning slope, the snow held a hundred king's ransoms in jewels that flashed in the sunlight. The millstream wound in a dark ribbon, serene between its moulded white banks.

"Ah, ha, wishin' you could go to school too, Miss?" our Sparrow-friend on the so-bare rose-bush outside the panes chuckled.

"Wouldn't like to learn your A-B-C's all over again?"

"They don't learn them any more!" we countered. "They commence with easy words, learning to recognize them by sight."

He shook his head. "You don't say so! And I can mind sittin' learn' off that little Alphabet card—big letters, little ones—and the numbers up to a big ova'—that meant ten. What time I wasted in gettin' my schoolin'!"

"One young thing we knew learned her letters off the new range. They were fashioned in the shining nickel trimmings—the stove's name, and somewhere too that of the foundry from which it came."

"There'd be no Z on it, would there?" he twinkled, lifting in the sunlight off then to search for gleanings of seeds in the barnyard.

"Your Christmas Cactus isn't going to wait for the Christmas!" Granddaughter commented

IF EVERY ONE
If everyone who drives a car could lie a month in bed. With broken bones and stitched-up wounds.

Of fractures of the head. And there endure the agonies. That many people do. They'd never need preach safety. Any more to me or you.

If every one could stand beside The bed of some close friend And hear the Doctor say "no hope!"

Before the fatal end. And see him there unconscious. Never knowing what took place. The laws and rules of traffic. I am sure we'd soon embrace.

If every one could meet The wife and children left behind And step into the darkened home Where once the sunlight shined. And look upon "the Vacant Chair!"

Where Daddy used to sit. I am sure each reckless driver Would be forced to think a bit.

If every one who takes the wheel Would say a little prayer, And keep in mind those in the car. Depending on his care. And make a vow and pledge himself

To never take a chance. The Great Crusade for Safety Would suddenly advance.

A Christmas Pageant Is Presented At Trinity

One of the lovely things December brings to Trinity W.M.S. is the beautiful Christmas pageant in their quest for the star. The shepherds from the Judean hills and the singing angels all play a colorful part.

Prominent Designer Wins High Place In U.S. Styles

"Designer of Clothes with the North American Look" is the title of an article by Virginia Phillips about the designer Dorothy Cox. A classic in literature is treasured writing that lasts through the years.

A "classic" in fashion is a design which is suited to our way of life and has an indestructible rightness that carries it through all seasons at home or abroad—and its reputation is, nine times out of ten, due to Dorothy Cox.

A Dorothy Cox design springs from a knowledge of what busy women, having home or office careers, want to wear daily to look smart and feel sharp.

Miss Cox was among the first to see the future of the shirtwaist dress and she is today an enthusiastic exponent of the two-piece casual suit. She feels, and rightly, too that it is the basic of smart wardrobe from coast to coast, whether you live in California, New York, Montreal, Vancouver or in belts for she believes spairmily between. You will find no knick-knacks on her fashions, no gadgetry of jeweled pins or fancy belts for she believes primarily in two essentials for her designs—simple lines and beautiful fabrics.

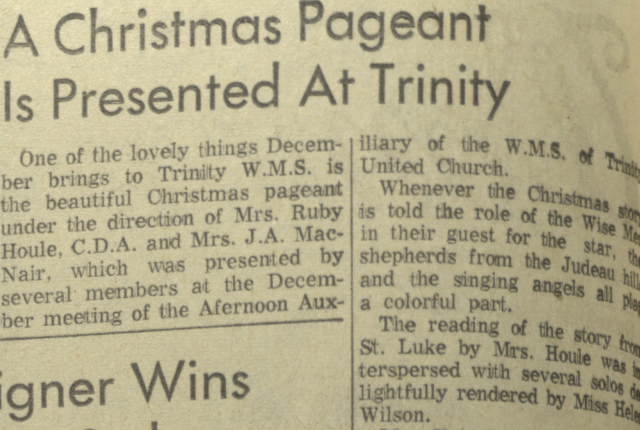

Her collection for Tanner of North Carolina this season leans toward plaids, lovely pastel paisleys and smart hound-tooth checks. When Miss Cox uses wool fringe on a plaid jacket, tucks or bias cut for checks, there is a new meaning to both design and fabric.

It was decided to provide the usual Christmas treat for members of the Explorer Group and Mission Band.

Mrs. J.A. MacNair, chairman of the nominating Committee, brought in the slate of officers for the ensuing year.

The offering was received and dedicated and meeting closed with Benediction.

A social time was enjoyed in the close when members of the executive served afternoon tea.

When the Christmas pageant is held the role of the Wise Men shepherds from the Judean hills and the singing angels all play a colorful part.
