THE SMUGGLER OF ST. JEAN; OR, THE HIDALGO'S WARD.

A STORY OF THE SPANISH COAST.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

CHAPTER XXI.

The alcalde breathed a little more freely when he heard the name of the old physician announced, for he imagined that the subject of Estelle's strange sickness was alone up for examination. Still he wondered why the duke had come. That puzzl d him

In a little while Doctor Ferdinand Batista entered the hall, and advanced to the dais He was the same who had attended Estelle, and he had officiated as physician at the castle for nearly forty years.

'Doctor Batista,' said the duke, when the old man stood before him. 'you have been for many years the family physician at San Martin?'

'Yes, my lord'

'You attended Don Bernardo d'Acosta on his return from Gibraltar?'

'I did'

'He had been wounded, I think?'

'He had.'

'What was the nature of that wound?'

'He had two wounds, my lord A bullet had passed through the right arm, and lodged in the breast; and a piece of an exploded shell had badly torn the calf of the right leg. I removed the bullet from his breast, and attended him until he was well.'

'Do you see that same Don Bernardo present in this hall?'

'Certainly my lord There he stands.'

'Will you have the kindness, doctor, to examine that right arm, and see if the bullet wound was ever properly healed.'

'My lord duke,' cried the alcalde, pale as death, 'why this unseemly exposure of my person? I protest against it.'

'Your protest is nothing to me,' replied Philip camly. 'You can resist it you think it best'

But the hidalgo had not the power to resist. His own officers, at the command of the duke, bared his right arm to the shoulder, and the old physician examined it.

'Padre Santo!' uttered Batista, as he looked in vain for any scar, 'can I have made such a mistake. It must have been the other arm.'

The other arm was examined, but with like result.

'I find nothing, my lord. The scar has entirely disappeared.'

'Look at the leg, then.'

The left leg was bared; and so was the right.

'Maria Santisima! There is no scar at all, my lord.

'Doctor Batista,' spoke the duke, slowly and sternly, 'under these circumstances, and in the light of your surgical experience, how can you account for these phenomena?'

The old physician seemed deeply puzzled, and he finally answered, with some hesitation:

'My lord duke, I can offer but one solution. This is not the man who was wounded at Gibraltar; for a cicatrice so deep as was that left upon the leg of that man could not, by any recuperative power of nature, have been obliterated.'

'And yet, doctor, you are confident that it was the veritable Bernardo d'Acosta from whose bosom you extracted the bullet?'

'I cannot be mistaken on that point, my lord, for he had only been absent from us a few short months.'

'That will do,' said the duke; and the doctor stepped aside and took a seat 'Now summon the second witness. Bring in Michael Ferrara.'

All hope and assurance had fled from the alcalde. He tottered backward as he heard that dread name pronounced, and, in mercy, Fernandez Casto gave him a seat.

Michael Ferrara, looking somewhat stronger than when he last saw him, but still bent with age and suffering, entered the hall, and stood before the dais.

'Michael Ferrara,' said the duke, 'you were once a seaman in the employ of Don Bernardo d'Acosta?'

'I was my lord.'

'Will you tell us the story of your adventures with your master upon the sea? Give us a plain statement of facts, from beginning to end.'

In a firm clear voice, the old man spoke as follows:

'You will understand, my lord, that one-and-twenty years ago Don Bernardo had his only child—a son—stolen from him For five years he vainly searched the kingdom through, and at the end of that time, broken in health and spirit, he determined upon a voyage to Turkey He fitted out his own vessel, and I went with him in the capacity of steward. Two or three days after leaving the Belearic Isles we fell in with a small boat in which was a single man, well nigh famished We took him on board, and a little nursing, with plenty of food soon restored him to health. He gave his name as Andre Gaubert, and confessed that he had been a smuggler. His vessel had been cast away, and all the crew lost save himself. He was intelligent, and an expert penman, and Don Bernardo employed him as his clerk, entrusting him with his most private business. The resemblance between this Andrea Gaubert and Don Bernardo was most remarkable. They were of the same age; and of the same size and form; and their features were so near alike that when their garbs corresponded, one might easily be mistaken for the other. The points of variance were such as were marked by their wide difference of character, and might not be noticed by the casual observer.

At the end of a month this Andrea Gaubert had planned one of the most diabolical schemes that can be imagined. It was nothing less than murdering of the whole crew, master and all, and passing himself off as the real Don Bernardo. At some one of the ports where we had stopped he had provided himself with poison, and was thus prepared to do his work. He had obtained from the hidalgo all the family history of the d'Acostas, and had also placed all the don's private papers where he could put his his hands upon them at any moment. Thus armed, not only with a knowledge of family secrets but also with the wonderful resemblance he bore to the hidalgo, he was ready for the consummation. One day he mixed a deadly poison with all the food that was to be eaten on board the vessel and before nightfall, save myself and the murderer, were either dead or dying. I was sick in my hammock at the time, and could eat nothing; and the villian in his eagerness, entirely overlooked me. When he felt sure that his work was done, he gathered together all the valuables he could find, both of money and jewels; also taking all Don Bernardo's papers; and when these had been placed in the largest boat, he scuttled the vessel, and left her to sink, thinking that thus he would sweep away every trace of his crime.

'But a just God did not allow such wickedness its full measure of success. As the water began to rush into the state-room where my hammock hung. I leaped out and made my way on deck. I saw that the vessel was sinking, and noticing a floating spar close by the side, I sprang into the sea, and caught it It was now almost dark, and I had not at first observed that another man was clinging to the same spar; but after the vessel had gone down, and my spar had escaped the vortex, I found that I had a companion; and that companion was none other than Don Bernardo himself. But he was not to remain with me long. There had not been so much poison put into his food as into that which had been served out to the others, but there had been enough to kill him. He told me he was dying and he knew the cause He had seen the murderer ransacking his desk, drawers, and lockers; and he had heard the wretch muttering to himself of the foul work he had in hand He had heard and seen enough to know all that had transpired; and you will understand that from his lips I gained much that I have already communicated Don Bernardo had been in his bunk when the vessel commenced to sink having passed through an ordeal of terrible bodily pain to a state of utter unconsciousness; but as the cold flood poured in upon him he revived sufficiently to crawl from his state-room to the deck, where he had cut loose the spar upon which I had found him. He reached the deck just as Andrea Gaubert had hoisted the sail of his boat.

Don Bernardo lived long enough to tell me his story, and shortly afterwards I noticed that his hold upon the spar was failing. I caught his hand, but I soon found it a dead weight. I moved nearer to him, so as to place my ear to his lips, when I discovered that I was the only living thing upon the spar. I let go the cold, stiff hand, and the body of Don Bernardo sank from my sight forever. On the following morning I was picked up by a Moorish vessel bound to Algiers, whither I was taken and sold into slavery. Fifteen long years was I held in bondage by the cruel Moor, and then I made my escape. In the meantime Andrea Gaubert, having assumed the name of Bernardo d'Acosta, reached Smyrna in safety, whence he wrote to the people of San Martin, announcing that he was going to India. At the end of twelve years he returned; and when he presented himself as the true lord of San Martin, no one doubted him. His letters, written in a hand exactly resembling Don Bernardo's, had been frequent, and everything seemed to conspire to help him in his plan of deceit. At length I arrived at the castle, and the villian recognized me. He gave me a powerful sleeping potion, and shut me up in one of his darkest dungeons, and would have put an end to my life by poison had not good Pepin and Lady Estelle saved me.

'Such, my lord, is my story, and if I have spoken one false word, may my name be stricken from the book of the Saving Angel forever.'

A pin might have been heard to drop in that hall as Michael Ferrara closed his narrative. Presently the prisoner started to his feet and tried to speak; but a sign from the Duke he was forced back, and again he hid his face.

'Let the next witness be summoned,' said Philip, before the startled assembly could find tongue for speech. 'Call Pepin.'

The old porter came in, and stood where Ferarra had stood. His evidence was simple, and to the point He testified to the intended murder of Michael Ferrara, and other acts of villainy on the part of the prisoner, whom we must now call Andrea Gaubert

Rafael Bertrand was the next witness called.

'Captain,' said the Duke, 'do you remember this man who has been acting the part of a Spanish hidalgo?'

'Yes, my lord, I remember him very well; and I knew him when I first set eyes upon him He was once commander of a smuggling vessel, and I was his lieutenant. I could swear to that even though he wore the robes, and bore the sceptre of the king of Spain. Do you mark that deep scar upon his brow? He says he got it while hunting in the jungles of India; but I know that he got it while fighting with the revenue officers on Cape Pal s.'

'Now, resumed the duke, after Bertrand had taken his seat, 'we come to another crime in the catalogue of this fiend's doings. Nina, stand here before me.'

The Moorish maid did as directed, and in a clear, firm voice she told the story of the attempted murder of her mistress She told how she had been warned by the Gipsy, and how she had afterwards detected the murderer in his work of death.

'Perhaps,' suggested the duke, 'you can tell us why Gaubert wished to remove the Lady Estelle?'

Yes my lord. He had asked her to marry him, and she had refused. Then he believed he had discovered that she loved another He had resolved that he would possess the vast wealth of Avilla, and the death of the heiress was the only event within accomplishment that could give him the coveted possession.'

Again did the prisoner start up—this time like a crazy man,—but before he could speak he was pulled back; and, by order of the duke a stout napkin was bound over his mouth.

'Now,' said Philip, 'we come to another matter Let Juan Bravo be summoned.

The Gipsy chieftain came in, bold and fearless and stood before the duke.

'Juan Bravo you have my solemn assurance that no testimony you may give shall ever be used against you. Touching the circumstance of the prisoner's having sought the death of Pepin and Michael Ferrara through your instrumentality I will not question you; for in that direction we know enough. It is on another subject that we want information You have heard of the loss of Don Bernardo's child?

Yes, my lord.'

'Can you give us any information thereon?'

'Yes—much Twenty one years ago, while our band was encamped in the glade where the great oak stands, and just after I had succeeded my father to the chieftainship, my wife, Culebra, stole the child from the garden of the castle. Don Bernardo had never been hard upon us, and I wished to return the child; but Culebra had taken a strong fancy for it, and would not give it up; so I sent her away, with one of her attendants, and when our camp was searched of course no child was found, save those of our own blood In the course of a few weeks I followed my wife, and found her near Cedrillas, in the mountain passes of Aragon. Several times during the next five years I saw the suffering father in search of his lost child; but he did not see me The boy grew apace, and became strong and buoyant; and my wife loved him as though he had been her own offspring. At length, when the boy was fifteen years of age, Culebra died, and shortly afterwards we pitched our tent at Vinaros, near the sea-shore The boy had been taught that Culebra was his own mother and he believed it; but when she was dead he no sympathy with the remaining members of our band; and within a month he ran away from us, and for years I did not see him again. I should have followed him had he made his light upon the solid earth; but he escaped on board a vessel that had been engaged in unloading contraband goods near Vinaros, so that pursuit was impossible. Since that time, my lord, he has had no part with us; but rather has his hand been valiantly lifted against us'

Juan Bravo moved aside, and Rafael Bertrand was again called up.

'Captain,' said the duke, 'can you finish the story which Juan Bravo has commenced? Can you tell us more than he has been able to tell?'

'Yes, my lord, I think I can. Eight years ago this very month I ran my vessel into the little bay of St. Jose, near the town of Vinaros and there unloaded some goods for which I had customers. As we were on the point of sailing, a lad, habited in Gipsy garb, came on board, and asked me to let him sail with me The moment I put my eyes upon him I knew he was not of Gipsy blood though firm in the belief that his mother, at least, was a Gitano He said that his mother was dead, and that he hated all the rest of the tribe, and that he would rather die than go back to them I liked his looks, and I took him; and I have never regretted the hour that brought him to my side, for he has been to me a true and faithful friend; a wise counsellor; a brave and dauntless supporter; and a most valuable officer.'

'Rafael Bertrand, is that lad present here?'

'He is a man now my lord. You behold in him the person whom we have known as Leon Murillo.'

'Juan Bravo, what say you to this?'

'I have only to say, my lord,' replied the Gipsy arising, 'that Leon Murillo is the child that my wife stole from the garden of this castle one and twenty years ago Do you remember the lady Isabella d'Acosta, my lord?'

'Yes, yes,' answered the duke, thoughtfully

'Then look where sits the youth, and tell me if you do not behold in the strength of manly mould, a counterpart of Lady Isabella's handsome face.'

'Madre de Dios!' cried Philip, clapping his hands, 'now I have it! His features were familiar, and yet I could not make them look as Don Bernardo's had looked. Padre Santo! it is his mother's face he bears!'

Never thinking of the gaze of those who stood around—thinking of nothing but the one overwhelming flood of wonderous light that had beamed so dazzingly upon her—Estelle d'Avilla moved to Leon's side, and pillowed her head upon his bosom.

'Thou, thou, Leon, art now my guardian! O, San Martin shall be still my home.'

'Nay nay, spoke the duke with a slight shake of the head. 'that may not be. Don Bernardo was appointed your guardian, and Don Bernardo is dead; and so the trust devolves upon me, as the representative of the Crown in Valencia. But, fair cousin, fear not that I shall be cruel. I know the story your heart would tell if it could speak in words; and thus do I perform the first act of my guardianship'

As Philip spoke, he stepped down from the dais, and took the hand of Leon and the hand of Estelle, and when he had joined them together, he added:

'Leon d'Acosta, to you I turn over my trust. Be true and faithful, and let the coming years bear testimony that I have made no mistake. Sweet cousin will you accept this new guardian?'

Estelle gazed a moment into Philip's face but she could not speak. She caught his hand and pressed it to her lips, at the same time dropping warm tears upon it; and then she turned to Leon and found rest once more within his embrace.

Andrea Gaubert had another trial before the court at Valencia, and was sentenced to death. He died, but not by the hand of the executioner He kept the phial which Sidi Hamed had given him, and it was found empty by his side after he was dead. Rafael Bertrand. now that his lieutenant could be with him no more, accepted the command of Duke Philip's yacht, and most of his old crew went with him into the new field of duty.

There were two porters at San Martin—Pepin and Michael Ferrara—both white-haired and bent with age; but they were faithful and honest, and equal to the duty required of them.

And there was a new master of San Martin and a new mistress. Leon and Estelle, blessed with every joy and comfort, entered upon the new life with grateful hearts; and while they loved each other with a devotion that knew no variableness nor shadow of turning, they found room in their souls for love of all those who looked to them for help and sympathy.

INK! INK! INK!

CARTER'S COMBINED WRITING & COPYING INK!

THIS COMBINATION INK has been awarded the HIGHEST PREMIUMS over all others in the United States and pronounced by the most celebrated Chemists the best Ink ever offered to the public it is used by many of the largest Commercial houses, Banks, Railroads, and other Corporations' and gives perfect satisfaction.

The Advantages of this over other Inks are:

FIRST—It flows freely from the pen, and does thicken by exposure to the air.

SECOND.—It will give a perfect and instantaneous copy

THIRD—It will not mould.

FOURTH—Being equally as good for Copying as for Book-keeping, it entirely does away with the use of two kinds of Ink.

FIFTH.—It is more permanent than common Inks.

SIXTH—The color, when first written, is a beautiful dark green, but in a remarkably short time it changes to a BRILLIANT JET BLACK—not a brownish black.

SEVENTH.—It is admirably adapted to the most delicate writing, and ALWAYS "makes its mark"

This Ink is warranted to flow as freely as any other Writing Fluid now in use; to give as perfect a copy as any Copying Ink; and not to mould.

This ink is for Sale at

The Most Reliable Friend!

Holloway's Ointment,

Its Searching & Healing Properties are known and recognized throughout the World.

The number of years this invaluable Ointment has stood the test of public opinion, (and the longer known the better appreciated) is a testimony of itself more convincing than anything that could be written in praise of its truly wonderful healing properties In the cure of bad legs, bad breasts, sores, wounds, and ulcers, its effect is marvellous. For ring-worm, scald-head, scrofula, and diseases of the scalp generally, there is no remedy to be compared to it. When assidiously rubbed upon the skin (previously well bathed in warm water this Ointment is quickly absorbed into the system, and cleanses, in its passage, every part to which it is applied.

Glandular Swellings, Mumps Bronchitis, Quinsey, Sore Throats and Diptheria.

In any of the above diseases, immediate and permanent relief is obtained by effectually rubbing this detergent Ointment, twice a day, upon the neck, chest and back Its acts upon the very mainsprings of life; for through the glands pass all new matter required for the body's reparation and all old particles detrimental to its preservation. The Ointment, used conjointly with Holloway's Pills, will act so searchingly and certainly as to effect cures in the most hopeless cases.

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Contracted and Stiff Joints.

Many thousands of martyrs from the above complaints have found life almost unsupportable; yet, if Holloway's Ointment be briskly and perseveringly rubbed upon the parts affected, ease may be safely guaranteed, especially if the pores of the skin by previously opened by fomentations with warm water The gross humors require expulsion from the system; it is therefore necessary to have recourse to Holloway's admirable Pills, which, by purifying and strengthening the system, greatly assist the operation of the Ointment and facilitate and confirm they cure

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, and Ulcerations of all kinds.

There is no medicinal preparation in the world which may be so thoroughly relied upon, in the treatment of the above ailments, as Holloway's Ointment Nothing can be so simple or safe as the manner in which it is applied, or its action on the body, both locally and constitutionally. The Ointment, rubbed around the part affected, enters the pores just as salt enters meat It quickly penetrates to the source of the evil and drives it from the system.

Erysipelas and Scrofulous Sores

In all irritations of the skin, sores, ulcers, burns or scrofulous enlargements of any kind, Holloway's Ointment presents a ready and easy means of cure. It manifests a peculiar power in restraining inflammation, removing stagnation, cooling the heated blood, and checking all acrimonious and unhealthy discharge.

Diseases attendant on Childhood.

Diseases incident to early life fall more under the management of the mother than the medicine man Holloway's Ointment should therefore be regarded by her as a "Household Treasure," as it never fails in bringing out the rash in measles and scarlatina; and for the removal of all skin diseases its effect is miraculous In cases of whooping cough and croup, this invaluable Ointment should be rubbed twice a day upon the throat and chest, and the youngest invalid will derive therefrom the most soothing relief. Two or three of Holloway's famous Pills, reduced to a powder, will augment the curative powers of the Unguent.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Bad Legs	Corns (soft)	Rheumatism
Bad Breasts	Cancers	Scald Heads
Burns	Contracted and Still Joints	Sore Nipples
Bunions	Elephantiasis	Sore Throats
Bite of Moschetoes and Sand Flies	Fistulas	Skin Diseases
Coco bay	Gout	Scurvy
Chiego-foot	Glandular Swellings	Sore Heads
Chilblains	Lumbago	Tumours
Chapped Hands	Piles	Ulcers
		Wounds
		Yaws
