

Observers Have Startling Postscript To Summit Talks

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—Here's a startling postscript to the summit talks—maybe Russia and the United States are getting a little too chummy!

Maybe, say two British observers, the time is coming when Americans and Russians—basically friendly folksy types—will collide in a massive bear-hug of mutual admiration, Senator McCarthy and the late Joe Stalin notwithstanding.

This new twist on an old cold-war theme is from R. H. S. Crossman and Sir Robert Boothby, a couple of British politicians who have always hankered after the big job in the foreign office. They went to Geneva to cover the conference, and returned with the notion that the relationship of the two great powers may be slowly changing.

MUCH IN COMMON

Discussing the idea in a BBC radio program, Sir Robert asked Crossman whether he didn't get the feeling, at times, that the two big nations had more in common with each other than with western European countries.

Crossman replied he did indeed, and went on to quote a "very distinguished" United Nations official as saying:

"Now look out. Once those Russians and Americans, with Stalin out of the way, get together, they'll go places very fast. These men, once they're together, they'll like each other."

"You British, you French, they think you a bit stand-offish. Take care. If they ever elick, they'll ciek in a big way."

OTHERS NOTE IT, TOO

Crossman, a left-wing Labor MP, writes in the Daily Mirror. Sir Robert, a Conservative who often takes an independent line, has a column in News of the World.

The left-wing New Statesman and Nation, of which Crossman used to be assistant editor, also refers to the more genial relations between Russia and the U.S. in an article headlined "Ernest Bevin's Nightmare," it quotes the late foreign secretary as saying: "If the two of them (America and Russia) ever gang up, there will be nothing left for anyone else."

The New Statesman article goes on to say that in an era of American-Russian entente, Britain would have to fend for herself and make her own decisions.

NO BASES IN PEACE

"In an era of peaceful coexistence, a stationary aircraft carrier (Britain) will be of dwindling value in the eyes of our American friends," adds the magazine, often critical of the U. S.

Crossman and Boothby would probably be the first to stress that their suggestion of ultimate U.S.-Soviet understanding, mentioned in passing in the course of a lengthy broadcast, was little more than a tentative impression, based on proceedings in the conference chambers and lakeside villas at Geneva. With that reservation, it can be assumed they were serious, not flippant.

RCGA Officials Forecast Tough Competition For The Canadian Golf Ch'ship

TORONTO (CP)—An advance entry list bristling with notable golfing names led Royal Canadian Golf Association officials Monday to forecast the keenest competition on record in the 1955 Canadian open golf championship.

Defending champion is Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon, whose victory in 1954 was the first for a Canadian in the country's oldest open tournament since 1914. He makes his title defence Aug. 17-20 over the suburban Weston course, back in top playing shape after a tough mauling by hurricane Hazel last fall.

The younger guard of name golfers from the U.S. includes Doug Ford of Yonkers, N.Y., who won the U. S. PGA championship recently at Detroit; Al Besselink, Newark, Del.; Bob Inman, Tulsa, Okla.; Dick Mayer, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Mike Souchak, Durham, N.C.; and Marty Furgol, Lemont, Ill., last year's U. S. Open champion.

Officials aren't discounting the possibility that a Canadian may click in the $15,000 event. Fletcher is a threat and so is Stan Leonard of Vancouver, close to the top before now in tough fields. Another possibility is Gerry Kesselring, Kitchener player now in his second year on the U. S. tournament circuit.

CONSTRUCTION PEAK

The total value of new and repair construction in Canada this year is estimated at $5,059,000,000, eight per cent higher than in 1954, the record year.

Canada Mink Group Re-elects Montgomery

By IVOR W. BOGGISS
TORONTO, Kenneth G. Montgomery, Edmonton, Alta., was re-elected for a second year of office as president of the Canada Mink Breeders, at the close of the annual conference here this afternoon.

Also re-elected for another year's office were Norman W. Shields, Fort William, Ont., executive secretary, and Clyde Schoales, Fort William, Ont., treasurer.

Four members at large of the executive committee, also named this afternoon were:

B. B. Jones, Charlottetown, P.E.I.; Kenneth Butterfield, Winnipeg, Man.; Joseph E. Connolly, Bathurst, N. B.; and R. C. Collins, New Westminster, B. C.

A resolution calling for an international conference of mink producers was carried unanimously at the conference.

Submitted by the Saskatchewan delegation, it was adopted without any new discussion in view of the airing which this subject, the need for international talks on production, imports and related matters, received yesterday.

There was enthusiastic reception to a formal motion originated by the same Western Canadian province to the effect that CMB must continue to do all in its own power to further cordial relations

Italy Reverberates With Debate On Soccer Expose

ROME (AP)—Italy reverberated Tuesday with repercussions of a soccer expose.

Shocked by the disclosure of the Italian Soccer Federation Monday night that the "Cinderella team" of Udine had "bought" a victory two years ago, newspapers editorially condemned the sagging morality in the national sport.

Udinese had been the surprise team of the Italian major soccer league in the 1954-55 season. The experts expected it to go nowhere. It fooled them by finishing second, behind Milan, the team which created a sensation in Russia by beating Moscow's Dynamo this year.

The soccer federation revealed Monday night it had evidence that Udinese paid players of "Pro Patria" of Busto Arsizio to lose a game in May, 1953. As punishment with United States breeder organizations.

Another resolution adopted by the conference empowers the executive committee of CMB now to enter into a formal agreement with Mutation Mink Breeders' Association respecting the licensing of CMB members to use EMBA certification trademarks. The term of this agreement is to be settled by the executive committee acting in behalf of CMB members.

Among other resolutions, it was voted that for the coming year there will be a total of 17 delegates named from the ten provinces of Canada, one each from the four Maritime provinces, three from Ontario and two each from Quebec and the four western provinces.

On veterinary research matters, particularly in the field of infectious enteritis in mink, it was resolved that CMB undertake support to advance control of this disease which this year for the first time is reported as having broken out in Manitoba.

A sum of $7,000 was voted for this year, to further develop research work.

An amount of $20,000 was endorsed for dark mink advertising, now to be promoted under the trade-name Majestic, for this year, with two-thirds to be spent between now and the year-end.

Potato Bulletin

Potato growers are advised that late blight has appeared in one field in the Fundy region of Kings County, Nova Scotia, and in one field on the Northumberland Strait side of Queens County, Prince Edward Island, states Weekly Potato Bulletin No. 8. In these areas, moist sea air keeps the foliage damp and consequently subject to infection. Spraying should be carried out in all regions, and a careful watch should be maintained over the fields in order that new infections may be discovered early.

Aphid populations have been building up rapidly during the past week in many potato fields. These aphids, in addition to causing direct damage by sucking the juice from the plants, will also spread virus diseases such as leaf-roll and mosaic. DDT is not particularly effective in controlling aphids but it is satisfactory for other species of potato insects. If aphids are numerous malathion 25 per cent wettable powder should be added to the spray at the rate of 2 to 2½ lbs. per 100 gallons of spray. Malathion does not give a good control of flea beetles which will begin to appear in about another week.
