Department is considering a series of lectures on consumer education and economics as an adult-education project and has consulted C. A. C. on the matter.

How many of us so called intelligent women take time to study the "why" of many of our "shopper headaches"? C.A.C. brings a number of these to our attention in its cleverly written monthly bulletin and tells us what C.A.C. is doing to try and rectify them.

I have to send in my annual report for P. E. I. by June 15th and I would appreciate it if I could have all renewals in by then. New members are always welcomed!

Personal

—Dr. and Mrs. J. A. MacDougal, of Rumford, Maine, were guests at commencement exercises and alumni dinner held at St. Dunstan's recently. Before returning to Maine they are spending a week's holiday at their summer home in Grand River.

—The period is the closing days of the Civil War, and Ladd, as a Confederate Cavalry Captain, is doing a solo cruise of the Colorado Territory to drum up support for the flagging Southern cause. Soon he's chaperoning gold prospector Arthur Kennedy and girl friend Lizabeth Scott at gun point. Reason: to prevent them from turning him over to a border town posse on suspicion of murder.

When the notorious General Quantrell storms into the area with 500 ragged Southern guerrillas, Ladd joins up with him and turns over the prisoners. In league with a murderous tribe of Indians, Quantrell and company ambush Union scouts, sack frontier towns and torture captives. Here Ladd sees that Quantrell is embarked on a campaign of plunder and murder to make the West his personal hallelujah, and he does a turnabout. How he fashions the downfall of the power-mad general and saves the life of the girl, who's playing hob with his pulse, is spelled out in a climax that bristles with ding-dong battle scenes.

to go? Once Mrs. Bear moved as if to go on along the Crooked Little Path, then stopped again as if she had changed her mind. At long last she moved on.

Mrs. Lightfoot's heart seemed to miss a beat. Mother Bear had left the Crooked Little Path and if she kept on the way she was going, she would pass very close to that other thicket. The cubs were following her, but they were not keeping close to her heels. They were running back and forth from side to side looking for something of interest.

Suppose they should go into that thicket? The very thought made Mrs. Lightfoot sick at heart. She was having a bad time, was Mrs. Lightfoot. She was having a very bad time. She had a precious secret in that thicket.

Coronations in Westminster Abbey take place at the spot where the nave, sanctuary and transepts meet.

PERSONALS

—Hal Wallis' "Red Mountain", which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, Summerside, is a splendidly spectacular Technicolor adventure that serves as an apt vehicle for the screen heroics of Alan Ladd. Brilliantly mounted on a scale that places it well above the average Western, this Paramount release pairs the rugged star with sultry Lizabeth Scott, and tidily parlays a volatile romance with action and suspense in a part-fact, part-fiction drama based on a turbulent episode in American history.

The period is the closing days of the Civil War, and Ladd, as a Confederate Cavalry Captain, is doing a solo cruise of the Colorado Territory to drum up support for the flagging Southern cause. Soon he's chaperoning gold prospector Arthur Kennedy and girl friend Lizabeth Scott at gun point. Reason: to prevent them from turning him over to a border town posse on suspicion of murder.
