

U.K. Press Increasingly Friendly Towards Israel

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—At a time when Israel finds herself under increasing fire in the United Nations and elsewhere she is receiving an increasingly friendly press in Britain.

Editorial opinion which in the past has taken a neutral stand at best in Israel's border difficulties with her Arab neighbors is swinging strongly in support of Prime Minister Ben-Gurion's insistence on keeping his troops in the Gaza Strip and the Agaba area until he gets some guarantees of security against Arab raiders.

While Suez developments undoubtedly are mainly responsible for the change in attitude, it is entirely to be expected that the UN attitude toward Britain over the Egyptian fighting.

But Britain's own experience in Suez has led to a growing feeling among commentators that territorial withdrawal behind the armistice lines will not bring peace between Israel and the Arabs unless it is accompanied by measures relieving the tension that has led to intermittent hostilities since the Palestine War ended.

PRESS VIEW CHANGED

A year ago The Times was deploring "intransigent" statements by Israeli spokesmen declining to make territorial concessions to the Arabs. Today it chides the United Nations for insisting on Israeli withdrawals from Gaza and Agaba without seeking any corresponding guarantees from Egypt.

The Evening News which like The Times had its reservations about Britain's Suez adventure now speaks with admiration of the "courage and restraint" of Israel's stand against withdrawal of her troops. It links Israel's demand for guarantees of free passage through the Gulf of Aqaba with Britain's own need for a similar guarantee involving the Suez Canal.

Almost every national newspaper and most of the weeklies have published sympathetic accounts by correspondents in Israel of the people's attitude toward the dispute.

The News Chronicle correspondent in Israel notes that even the popular Ben-Gurion would be speedily ousted if he showed signs of compromising on the issue.

A Labor member of Parliament Barbara Castle writes in similar vein in The New Statesman and Nation and a leading article in The Spectator expresses disappointment that Britain's UN delegation is not making more vigorous efforts toward obtaining for Israel "the guarantees to which it is morally entitled."

The Economist argues that Egypt's six-year blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba and the Suez Canal to Israeli shipping is as much a violation of the 1948 Israeli-Arab armistice as Israel's seizure of Egyptian territory and calls on the UN to solve both problems simultaneously.

Magistrate Fines Local Pair $50

In addition, the first offender, charged with property damage was ordered to pay for the damage he had caused. The second offender was charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle.

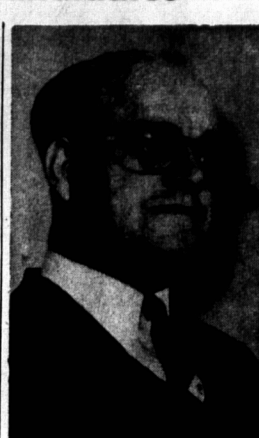

The only offender under the Temperance act, a Cornwall resident, was fined $25, and costs for having unlawful liquor in his possession.

A Tracadie resident and a Lennox Island resident were each fined $5 and costs for having defective equipment on their motor vehicles. Similar fines were imposed on a Mt. Stewart resident for operating a vehicle without plates and an unlicensed driver from Hunter River. A reprimand was given in the case of a Charlottetown resident charged with leaving a vehicle unattended on the travelled portion of the highway.

Rank Studios Call Upon A Canadian Actor

LONDON (CP)—Just when life in the British film world seemed pretty dull along came a big break for Canadian actor Bill Nagy.

He got a telephone call from Rod Steiger, the American actor who specializes in "heavy" parts. Steiger wanted the 36-year-old Nagy for a feature part in Across the Bridge, now in production at Arthur Rank's Pinewood Studios.

"I have had to thank for all this," said Nagy in an interview at his Hampstead flat. "He talked the director into giving me the chance."

The two actors became friendly in New York about nine years ago but lost contact when Nagy came to London in 1949. The part

In Across the Bridge came along at a time when Nagy was in a rather dull patch professionally speaking, and he was thinking of returning to Canada, along with his actress wife, Janet MacFarlane, formerly of Montreal, and their daughter Christina, 3.

Nagy was born in Hungary but went to Canada at the age of six. He lived in Hamilton and Oshawa, Ont. Since he came to Britain he has made 40 films. Some recent ones are Joe Macbeth, High Tide at Noon, and Charlie Chaplin's King in New York, the last not yet released. He also played the part of Stewpot in South Pacific when it came to London.

His re-haired wife was playing in Brigadoon when she met and married Nagy. Her last film part was in The Story of Esther Costello in which she plays a school-teacher.

The first telephone exchange in Canada was opened in 178 at Hamilton.

things of course, that everyone would recognize as offenses against humanity. But to take a simple example: we can all see the connection between human rights and the laws of libel. But what will happen to a man's good name if someone pushes defamatory to a point just short of libel? Some kinds of injustice can be done without breaking the law.

Or take the controversial matter of indecent books. There are some books which no responsible parent would want his children to read; and some that no self-respecting person would want to be found reading. We do not want these books around, and the law might help us to get rid of them.

But what of books that are just within the law? They would obviously be just as dangerous as or nastier than those which would barely break the law. No law could possibly substitute for parental responsibility and self-respect; and without these qualities, no law could possibly achieve its end.

Parkdale Had 1956 Surplus; Small Tax Increase Forecast

The annual meeting of the ratepayers of the village of Parkdale was held in the Institute Hall on Feb. 5th.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman of the commissioners, G.C. Ramsay, and present were all the commissioners, as well as the clerk of the village, A.D. Seaman.

Minutes of the last annual meeting, as well as those of a special meeting called to deal with problems relating to the new fire hall, were approved without change.

The chairman, in his report to the ratepayers, gave a general outline of the activities carried on by the various committees, and expressed satisfaction with the progress made in the village during the last year. His gratitude was expressed for the cooperation of the people in Parkdale, and also for the consideration of the problems shown by representatives in the Provincial Government, as well as the courtesy shown by the Government itself.

Committee chairmen reported for water and sewerage police and fire department, streets, street lights, and finance. The chairman of the committee for water and sewerage reported that little is now being done pending a report engineer, whose report is expected to be made to the metropolitan committee the last of February.

The audited financial statement showed that the general expenditures for the year were $6,355.34, with a surplus revenue of $230.10, and appears to warrant a tax increase of five cents per hundred dollars assessment.

All the reports of committees, as well as estimates for the year

Big Oil Refinery In Montreal Area

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Duplessis Friday announced that British Petroleum of London, Eng. will build a $60,000,000 refinery and distribution centre on the northern outskirts of Montreal.

During a press conference, Mr. Duplessis said the company will build its installations on a 600-acre lot in Ville d'Anjou. The refinery is the company's first venture in Canada. It will also be the town's first major industry. Capacity of the refinery will be 30,000 barrels.

The company acquired a 50 per cent interest in Triad Oil Co., Calgary, Alta., in 1953. British Petroleum's main source of crude oil was in the Middle East.

THOUGHTS FOR OUR TIME

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan

RESPECT FOR LAW NEEDED TO ACHIEVE TRUE JUSTICE

Modern means of communication—the newspapers, the radio, movies and television—have had many effects on the world, some good, and some bad. But one wonderful effect is this: they have made the world we live in smaller. Names of places that were formerly only words printed on a map now bring to our minds pictures of their streets and their people, and their recent history is as familiar to us as that of our own country.

No is this just a matter of knowledge; our opinions on the things we read about in the newspapers may even have an effect on the events themselves. Some times this is quite indirect, but we have only to look at the part played by our elected representatives, not only in our own country, but in international bodies, to see how true it is, that what we think may have an effect on people across the world, just as what they think may have an effect on us.

This, of course, only extends to other countries a responsibility that we already have towards our own country. The point that I would like to make today is that in a curious way it seems easier for us to judge issues in faraway countries than here at home.

I do not mean that we know the facts well enough in these international matters; indeed, we are often conscious of our limitations that way. But when we are told the facts we instinctively feel that we can apply them correctly. When aggression or injustice is established as a fact, we know that it is wrong. When men suffer because of laws made to protect not human but national rights, we know that something is wrong with those laws.

When we make judgments like these, we are not applying any special knowledge of international law. Rather, we are looking at the human nature which we share with all men, and through our sympathy with other men we know instinctively that some things are fair or unfair, just or unjust.

It is in the needs of this common human nature that we find the basis for all the laws that men make: circumstances of time and place, of custom and necessity will change the forms that these laws will take; but the solid foundation of law, beneath all change, will remain this human nature that we all instinctively respect.

This applies as much in Canada, of course, as in Egypt or Israel. But here is the curious fact: perhaps because we know more about the law of our own country; perhaps because we get so used to reality that we do not really see it for one reason or another, we often take our own laws for granted, keeping them because we have to keep them, and because we would be punished if we were caught breaking them.

Even when we are thinking for other people and the law, we ask most easily the question, "What is the law?" than "What are the
