WASHINGTON, (AP) — Buildings of the future may be built partly of wheat, a Washington research scientist said Wednesday. Stanley F. Reed, president of Reed Research, Inc., announced development of a process in which wheat can be used to make what he called a strong, weather proof, insulating and light construction material. He said it could be produced commercially and sold at prices much lower than those for currently available competitive materials.

Synopsis

Gary Tallman, young petroleum engineer from Alabama, misses his bus in Texas and Mona Mason, wife of a cattle rancher, gives him a lift. Gary is injured when her car crashes in a ditch and the Masons nurse him back to health. He falls in love with Mona's daughter Adelaide but, unwilling to propose until he has a job, Gary plans to leave for Mexico. Meanwhile he suspects there is oil in the property and tells tests of Oliver Kimball, Harvey's son-in-law. Hickey is employed to drill a well. Harvey persuades Gary to remain until tests are made. Oliver and Grace Kimball insinuate that Gary is the agent of an oil company which is putting obstacles in the way of Harvey's undertakings.

CHAPTER XXIV

Tingling with wild anger, Gary went up to his room. He began throwing things into his suitcase, and then stopped long enough to sit down at the desk and dash off a letter to the Republic Oil Company. Fortunately, he remembered the name of the man who had hired him last fall. He stated his case bluntly and asked for a collect telegram in reply, refuting Oliver's absurd accusations.

Harvey, Gary suspected, was a little too sensible to believe Oliver entirely—and yet, he was confused and wary and was not going to accept anything now till it was definitely proven. But meanwhile the well was going down. He could hear, across the pasture, the grunt of the draw gear and the distant clanking of pipe. He snapped his suitcase shut, fastened it, and started downstairs. On the landing Mona Lee was waiting for him. She laid a detaining hand on his arm and her motherly face was troubled and anxious.

"Gary—now don't you do anything silly, just on account of what Oliver said. I don't believe a word of it—and Harvey won't either, when he has time to think it through. Take that suitcase straight back upstairs."

"Mrs. Mason, I'm sorry—but you must see that I couldn't possibly stay here any longer, under the circumstances. I've done the very best I could for Mr. Mason, but he hasn't any real need of me. Hickey will go on with the well—and as soon as this matter Oliver brought up is settled, I'll be on my way. Of course I can't leave town with an accusation like this hanging over me, but I can leave this house—I have to leave. I'll pay back every penny that I owe to you, as quickly as I can."

"Oh, Gary, don't be so stubborn! And don't talk about paying us back, for anything."

"I have to talk about it—and think about it. And I have to end the obligation as quickly as possible, now. But I can never pay back a lot of thing I owe to you and all the Masons. I want you to know that I'm grateful."

Mona Lee's face crinkled unhappily. "I don't know why I have all stubborn people around me," she murmured. "I'm a reasonable sort of person—and why does everybody that I care about have to be so stiff-necked and obstinate? Where are you going, Gary?"

"I don't know. I'll find a room somewhere. I've written to Mr. Armstrong, of the Republic Company. As soon as I have an answer I'll go on to Mexico, probably. There will be a job open there, I hope."

"You talk to Harvey before you go, Gary, wait till Oliver leaves—wait till he gets his thinking straightened around a little. Right now he doesn't know what to think. I know Harvey better than you do."

"I'm sorry again, but I can't do that either. Later, when I can prove to him that all this is absurd, I'll talk to him. But not now. Do you think Slim could take me into town, Mrs. Mason? I dislike to ask any more favors—I could walk, but this suitcase is pretty heavy."

"I'll take you to town myself," she announced crisply. "And I know a good place for you to stay—the woman is a friend of mine. I think all this is too silly for words. But if you're bound to go, come along."

None of the others appeared when the car was backed out, and Gary flung his suitcase into it and climbed in. He was still aching with outraged anger, he did not look back. And he did not calm down enough to face his situation until he was in the room. Mona Lee had found for him, and flung himself across the comfortable looking bed. Then, as his stinging indignation cooled a little the dreary facts grimly intruded themselves.

Eisenhower Hits At McCarthy In New Round Of Quarrel

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON, (AP) — President Eisenhower spoke out against "disregard of fair play" Wednesday in words aimed unmistakably at Senator Joseph McCarthy. And in defending the military services as "completely loyal," Eisenhower paid specific tribute to Brig-Gen. Ralph Zwicker, the demedalled war hero McCarthy accused of being unfit to command.

The President had his say in a formal press conference statement. McCarthy bounced back one of his own an hour later. "If a stupid, arrogant or witless man in a position of power appears before our committee and is found aiding the Communist party," the senator said, "he will be exposed. The fact that he might be a general places him in no special class so far as I am concerned."

Split Widens

It was another round in the ruckus that exploded within the Republican party 11 days ago when Army Secretary Robert Stevens challenged McCarthy's treatment of Zwicker as humiliating and abusive. Eisenhower fell short of the get-tough expectations of some of his friends in reproving the investigative methods of Senator McCarthy. The upshot of Wednesday's exchange seemed to indicate a widening split between the White House and McCarthy wings of the Republican party—a rift that seemed likely to continue into the fall election campaign in which a new House of Representatives and one third of the Senate will be chosen.

By failing to mention McCarthy's name in his statement Eisenhower took much of the sting out of what otherwise might have been regarded as crackling criticism of the Wisconsin senator's operations.

Riding High

The practical political effect, for the present at least, seemed to leave McCarthy riding as high as ever—with little prospect of any material change in his methods.

In his statement, the President conceded, as Stevens had done before, that "the department of the army made serious errors in handling the Maj. Irving Peress case." Procedures are being corrected, Eisenhower said, to avoid such mistakes in the future.

But he also said that officials in the executive branch "will have my unqualified support" in insisting that employees appearing before any executive or congressional investigation "be treated fairly."

"In opposing Communism," the President said, "we are defeating ourselves if either by design or through carelessness, we use methods that do not conform to the American sense of justice and fair play."

Need Full Attention

The vital domestic and foreign problems facing the nation, Eisenhower said, deserve undivided, incessant attention of Congress, the executive branch, schools, churches and media of public information. "I regard it as unfortunate," he said, "when we are diverted from these grave problems—of which one is vigilance against any kind of internal subversion—through disregard of the standards of fair play recognized by the American people."

McCarthy issued a statement saying that: "Apparently the President and I now agree on the necessity of getting rid of Communists. We apparently disagree only on how we should handle those who protect Communists."

Later on, McCarthy asked newspaper men to take out the "now" in the line about agreement on combating Reds. He said the word was receiving "a false inter-

Gov't Silent On Screening Of Civil Servants

OTTAWA, (CP)—The government has declined to disclose details of the screening of civil servants for security on grounds that it does not want to promote "McCarthyism" in Canada.

Acting Prime Minister Howe announced Wednesday the government's stand in the Commons when he said the administration would not reply to two questions placed on the order paper by Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops).

Mr. Fulton asked the government to name the members of the government's security panel. He also asked for details of the panel's operations and the number of government employees dismissed for security reasons.

Mr. Howe said it would not be in the "public interest" to answer the questions. The board acted anonymously and made only recommendations to deputy ministers in connection with the loyalty of government workers.

The panel investigated employees and conveyed its recommendation to heads of departments. It did not order dismissals.

Mr. Howe said "we all abhor McCarthyism." The panel worked secretly because Canada was trying not to raise the kind of disensions which existed in other countries. It was not in the public interest for the government to say why an employee was dismissed. There might be other grounds in addition to security.

Medical Officers Switch Commands

OTTAWA, (CP) — Two senior medical officers will switch appointments in April.

Col. E. J. Young, 46, of Edmonton, now command medical officer at headquarters western command, will replace Col. J. S. McCannel, 42, of Vancouver, as assistant director of medical services at headquarters of the British Commonwealth Division in Korea.

On completion of leave after his return to Canada, Col. McCannel will become chief medical officer at western command headquarters at Edmonton.
