ELLEN'S DIARY

Important News! Yes, Robins Are Here Again!

"I've important news for you... in three guesses!" Granddaughter smiled this morning, bringing in the tea and sugar, the yeast and other groceries she had bought on behalf of this house, in a trip to the store at the corner.

"Well" we chuckled "the first says... that Sputnik 2 has fallen in the back field!" She giggled. "How silly!" It's supposed to disintegrate - to fall in fragments, you see. One guess lost" she nodded. "Two still to go."

"The second guess says" we grinned "your grandfather has a notion of buying a piece of land on the moon?" She laughed. "That's sillier!" He'd have to see it first, wouldn't he? And besides, he wouldn't fancy space - travelling, you know that. No, wrong again - and only another guess."

"Then it must be... the robins have at last come home!" we said softly. She nodded. "Not home exactly but I saw a number of them in a meadow when we were coming from the store. Isn't it wonderful!" she said.

By this afternoon "dat ole" summery song, in part, was to be heard in the yards at Alderlea.

And Mack hearing offered "It is pretty, isn't it? I don't believe there's anything nicer to hear than the robins' songs again. It makes you think of new things; green grass and leaves and..." "Fishing," we suggested.

"Yes. For when they're back, we know the earthworms are up to the top of the ground - or near it, for them to feed on."

"Makes us think too of May-flowers and dandelions and violets," we said.

"And the swallows' coming" he nodded, "and all the other summer birds. It will be good to have summer again."

We sighed. How quickly it would come—and go. Like the silken rustle of a warm wind passing in the leaves, it would be to us, here and gone. But to a little lad, it would be a long lovely time, a season of sunlight and happiness.

By way of enjoying our summer more, if that could be, we transplanted seedlings of pansies from the tin on a sill that had birthed them, to roomy flat, this

3rd Generation Of Kellys Operate Hotel In Ireland

"Were you brought up to go into the hotel business?" I asked. William J Kelly of Ireland chuckled. "I was born into it. My grandfather built the Strand Hotel in Rosslare. Later my father ran it, and now it's my operation. After surviving three generations of Kellys, it's still going strong. SELF-CONTAINED HOTEL "It's different from any hotel I've seen in the United States, ma'am," he continued. "Rosslare is what might be called self-contained. We have our own herd of Jersey cows; produce our own veal. We raise our own chickens, and ducks, produce our own eggs. The pigs and hams are first quality. "We raise all our own fruits and vegetables; lots of celery Brussels sprouts, potatoes, turnips, carrots and beets; tomatoes and cucumbers, string beans and wax beans, also the Scarlet runner broad beans which, I understand, you do not use much in the United States, and a type of lettuce that is different from the kind you have here, for it's crisp and yet soft. "As yet, the Irish haven't learned to like green corn, although we can raise it if it can be made a fashion. FRESH FROM GARDEN "All the vegetables we serve are garden-fresh. "We are very particular about the way we cook vegetables, often seasoning them with fresh herbs from the kitchen garden. "Come and visit us sometime." I assured Mr. Kelly I couldn't wait to hop over. Pending that time, I'm enjoying vegetables prepared in his own unusual way. Leaf Spinach on Branch: Carefully wash tender spinach leaves, but do not detach from the stems. Sauté until well wilted in unsalted butter. Brussels Sprouts With Basil: Wash and trim fresh Brussels sprouts as necessary, or use frozen Brussels sprouts. "Boil in 1 in. salted water until almost tender. Finish sautéing in basil-butter. Festival Salad: Arrange individually chilled, crisp lettuce hearts, filled with sliced hard-cooked egg. Surround with halved, thin-sliced tomatoes and halved, peeled orange slices overlapping. Garnish with sour cream dressing. Tomorrow's Dinner: Chicken soup with parsley, braised pork chops, colcannon, Irish bread, lettuce-cress salad, plum tarts, coffee, tea and milk. All measurements are level; recipes proportioned to serve 4 to 6. Colcannon From Ireland: This is a delightful melange of vegetables. Boil separately 6 pared medium-sized potatoes and 1 fine-shredded small head of cabbage. Meantime saute, in 1/4 c. butter until yellowed. 1 sliced medium-sized onion, 1 crushed peeled section garlic and 6 scallions with 3 in. of the green tops. Crush the potatoes while hot. Drain and add the cabbage and sauteed vegetables. Stir in 1/4 tsp. pepper, 1/2 tsp. salt and 2 tbsps. cream. Turn into a buttered, low 3-qt. casserole. Dot with 1 tbsps. butter. Brown in a hot oven. Basil Butter from the Chef: Blend 1/4 c. room-soft butter, 1 tsp. lemon juice and 1 tsp. powdered basil. Use for seasoning Brussels sprouts, cabbage or cauliflower.
