DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead—king of spades. In the ordinary course of events, declarer will meet a certain number of deals where his contract is sure to make regardless of how the opponents' cards are divided. Some of these hands make by sheer force, no matter how declarer chooses to play them. Such hands are sometimes called pianolas.

In other hands that are equally sure to make, a moderate amount of skill may be required to protect against the possibility of defeat. These are the hands to which the student of the game should address his attention. Today's deal is of that class. South is sure to make three no trump against any distribution of the opponents' cards, provided he takes certain necessary precautions.

Dummy's long heart suit is good for six tricks except if one declarer has four or five hearts to the jack. Declarer's first concern, therefore, is to guard against the possibility of an unfavorable heart break.

The first protective step is taken when the king of spades is permitted to win. Refusal of the trick acts as a barrier to continuation of the suit, and at the same time, prevents the spade suit from being subsequently run against declarer. This could happen if the ace were taken and East obtained the lead to come through the J-3.

Assume West shifts to the diamond. South wins with the king, cashes the ace of hearts, and leads the queen of hearts. After West follows, declarer overtakes the queen with the king to guard against the chance West may have been dealt J-x-x of hearts. This protective step may cost declarer a trick (where the hearts are divided 3-2), but is taken to insure the capture of at least five heart tricks and guarantee the contract. The ten of hearts is next led and at least nine tricks become a certainty. Overtaking the heart queen may seem wasteful, but since it provides against any possibility of defeat, it is clearly the right play.
