Rev. David MacDonald Seeks PC Nomination

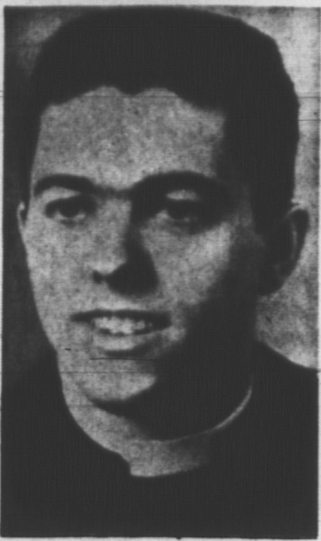

Rev. David MacDonald, pastor of the United Church in Alberton, has decided to allow his name to go before the Progressive Conservative nominating convention in Summer Saturday, he announced last evening.

Mr. MacDonald, a native of Charlottetown, has been residing in Alberton since 1962 and since moving there has become interested and involved in the community affairs of Alberton and West Prince.

He is a graduate of Prince of Wales College, Dalhousie University and the Pine Hill Divinity College. He was national president of the United Church Young People's Organization from 1958 until 1960.

In 1961 he was a member of the delegation of the Canadian Council of Churches which attended the World Council of Churches held that year in India.

He was one of two Prince Edward Island directors of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce from 1963 until 1965 and is the vice-president for Prince County of the United Nations Association in the Island.

MR. MACDONALD

Mr. MacDonald is at present vice-chairman of the Senior Citizens Housing Commission on the Island.

During his college years both in Charlottetown and in Halifax Mr. MacDonald was a part time broadcaster and still does free lance material for the CBC.

New York Mets Plan For 1966

NEW YORK (AP)—Ed Kranepool, Ron Hunt, Ron Swoboda, Greg Goossen and a pair of promising 21-year-old pitchers—Tug McGraw and Dick Selma—will provide the nucleus of New York Mets for 1966.

Other possible Mets of the future, such as infielders Buddy Harrelson and Dave Smith, outfielders Al Yates, Steve Renko and Shawn Fitzmaurice, and pitchers Rob Gardner, Bill Rohr and Bill Debeny, will receive close inspection during the winter league season starting next month and at spring training.

All performed in the minors this year. Embarrassed by their four straight last-place National League finishes, the Mets brass apparently has become convinced it must concentrate exclusively on youth to change their 10th-place image.

The plan, outlined Monday at the opening of a four-day organizational meeting, calls for the disposal, by trade or otherwise, of such older regulars as pitchers Alvin Jackson, Jack Fisher and Galen Cisco; catcher Chris Cannizzaro; infielders Chuck Hillier and Bobby Kalus and outfielders Joe Christopher and Jim Hickman.

Such veterans as Roy McMillan and Charlie Smith, along with outfielder Johnny Lewis, may be retained.

Perhaps the brightest prospect, aside from McGraw and Selma is Goossen, a 20-year-old native of California who was grabbed for the special $8,000 waiver price from the Dodgers last May. Goossen, a first-year player, was declared expendable by the Dodgers, who either had to keep him on their big league roster or expose him to waivers.

Goossen was the No. 1 catcher with the Mets' Williamsport, Pa. farm club in the Eastern League, where he hit close to .300.

"Our biggest need is power," said Wes Westrum, the Mets acting manager. "We especially need a strong hitting centre fielder and a take-charge catcher."

Mr. Dart, represented by John P. Nicholson, was charged in connection with the May 10 highway death of James Joseph Robinson, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Murchison Robinson of Stanhope.

In dismissing the charge Magistrate Johnston said, "I cannot see where there is any evidence of wanton or reckless driving or any evidence the accused did not have control of his vehicle."

Crown Prosecutor Alan K. Scales called eight witnesses for the Crown. Mr. Nicholson did not call any for the defence nor did the accused make any statement.

Negligence Charge Is Dismissed

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—American Football League club owners gave formal approval Monday to a 1966 franchise for Miami, Fla.

The owners returned to executive session with further expansion in 1966 or 1967 believed to be a major item on their agenda.

The Miami franchise action amounted to formal ratification of a telephone vote taken in July.

Meeting with the club owners was Joe Robbie, a Minneapolis lawyer who, with comedian Danny Thomas, co-owns the Miami franchise.

Robbie said the first Miami front office executive to be selected probably will be a talent scout or director of player personnel.

"We would like to start with a general manager or a coach, but we must do the necessary things first," he said. "We will have to make selections from the league player pool in January and participate in the college draft within the next eight or nine months."

RIVARD JURY

The four were brought to court early Monday under heavy guard to hear Judge Connolly rule on the delay motion by Rivard's lawyer William C. Wright of Laredo.

At 7:40 a.m. a white sedan took Rivard the three blocks from Webb County jail to the federal court house and four armed U.S. marshals—one carrying a shotgun—whisked him downstairs to the cell. The other three men made a similar trip in a regular patrol wagon.

Upstairs as the trial opened elevator service to the third floor where the courtroom is located was shut off and reporters and spectators had to produce identification to get past a barred gate at the head of the stairs.

U.S. border patrol officers with guns swinging from open holsters paced the corridors and plainclothes marshals ringed the courtroom.

An all-male jury was selected after a long process of winnowing out disqualified persons and those wishing to be excused. Eight members of the jury were Spanish-Americans, as are the majority of the population of this town on the Rio Grande.

Three others were excused because they could not either speak or write English.

Rivard and two of the co-defendants came into court equipped with local lawyers but Jones, a 36-year-old former salesman, told the court through a local lawyer that he could not afford one. The court ordered he be provided with free legal service.

Jones and Gagnon, 35, are alleged to have been carriers of narcotics for Rivard. Groleau, a frail-looking, white-haired man in his 50s, is alleged to have passed on orders from Rivard.

Rivard, whose suburn-haired wife visited him in jail during the weekend but did not appear in court at the first session, took an active interest in the unfamiliar proceedings, reading documents through horn-rimmed glasses, consulting frequently with his lawyer and peering over Wright's shoulder occasionally to see what the lawyer was reading.

Judge Connolly, a baldish, heavy-set man from Houston with a reputation for running a no-nonsense court, told the jurors the defendants were to get a fair and impartial trial and ordered them to disqualify themselves if they had anything against Canadians. None did. However, three did disqualify themselves on the ground they had fixed opinions about the accused's guilt or innocence.

About a dozen were left off on various excuses. One who pleaded hardness of hearing was unsuccessful. "We'll turn up the loudspeaker," the judge advised. Another who claimed he was "subject to my fever attacks" was told "We'll take care of that here."

Mr. Fisher said preliminary plans are underway to approach Canadian railways and airlines to initiate some sort of "centennial rate structure" during 1967 which would make travel easier for Canadians and encourage them to see more of their country.

He praised Newfoundland's initiative in having made the most project applications per capita of any Canadian province. Newfoundland has made 33 applications for community projects to date, 29 of which have been accepted.

However, Mr. Fisher said the best showing of any single community in Canada so far was by the community of St. Paul, Alta., which has started 30 centennial projects, all without any financial aid from the commission.

The commission contributes to each province at the rate of $1.00 per capita plus a grant to each provincial capital equaling 50 per cent of the cost of its planned project.

far-northern community that requests the commission to help in the construction of a crematorium. The application explained that since the community was built on permafrost, it was impossible to bury the dead. The application was refused.

Mr. Fisher said almost any reasonable project is accepted, providing it is to be a distinct part of the community and is cultural, educational or recreational.

PLANS BOOK. He said the commission hopes to be able to put out a "book of events" that will give details on all major centennial projects by mid-1966 when all major planning should be completed.

All children born in 1967 are to be presented with a certificate and it is hoped all living persons born in 1967 will be recognized with a similar certificate. Another proposed project would be to strike a medalion to commemorate the occasion.

Irish Airman Is Fined $75

SUMMERSIDE — Michael Murchie Ridgeway of the RAF, Bally Kelly Northern Ireland, was fined $75 and costs yesterday for taking a vehicle with intent to operate without the owner's consent.

The accused, who appeared in town police court before Magistrate R. S. Hinton, QC, is a crew member of an aircraft from the Northern Ireland RAF base making a brief visit here.

He had pleaded guilty to the charge Saturday morning.

The charge arose following a two-car collision at 2:20 a.m. Saturday morning at the intersection of the military road leading to RCAF Summerside and the main highway.

The vehicles involved were a 1958 model car owned by Ralph Somier of Summerside which the accused was charged with taking and a 1965 model operated by Victor Robert Howlett of the local RCAF Station. Total damage was $400.

A passenger in the vehicle driven by the accused, Andy Jones, also a crew member of the same aircraft, was taken to the base hospital suffering from minor cuts and bruises.

A Summerside man, the only other case on the docket yesterday, was fined $20 and costs or 10 days when he appeared on a charge of drunkenness.

Insurance Voted For Town Firemen

KENSINGTON — A motion was passed at the Kensington Town Council meeting last evening that bills amounting to $1,591.20 be paid.

A building permit was granted for the construction of a new home to Dr. Harold Stewart.

A motion was passed that the firemen be covered by insurance in case of accident while on duty.

Mr. Smith, a representative of Keith Pickard Architects, attended the meeting and discussed the blueprints for a proposed new recreation centre to be built on the old elementary school property. The council will consider the matter and expects to reach a decision in the near future.

Bizarre Centennial Ideas Proposed By Communities

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—John Fisher, chairman of the Centennial Commission, said Monday some communities across the country have come up with bizarre ideas for celebrating the national anniversary and have been refused grants.

Mr. Fisher, attending the commission's 14th meeting here, said in an interview project applications have been mostly acceptable but there have been some exceptions. These ranged from one community that wanted to build a sewer system to another that wanted to redecorate its cemetery. A joke among commissioners is one request from a far-northern community that requests the commission to help in the construction of a crematorium. The application explained that since the community was built on permafrost, it was impossible to bury the dead. The application was refused.

Mr. Fisher said almost any reasonable project is accepted, providing it is to be a distinct part of the community and is cultural, educational or recreational.
