Perishing Cattle.

TERRIBLE HAVOC AMONG THE RANGES IN COLORADO AND WESTERN NEBRASKA.

Advices from Lincoln, Neb., under date Feb. 19, say: The damage to telegraph wires has made the task of collection of the details of the late storm in Colorado and western Nebraska very slow and tedious.
As the news comes in, it shows that the disturbance was the worst in the history of the region affected by it. The storm raged in the mountains, and descended upon the plains. These had been dry and free of moisture so long that neither man nor beast could stand before the rush. The roof of the Burlington roundhouse at Akron was blown off. West of McCook two men were picked up dead, and another so badly frozen and exhausted that his life is despaired of. Many other fatalities are expected when reports come in from the territory distant from the railroads. As the trains come in to-day passengers and train-men saw cattle buried to their heads in the snow. As hardly a cow was seen elsewhere, it is evident that many are entirely covered. Most of those seen will perish; in fact, all except the few that can be found and dug out by the small force available for that purpose. The losses of cattle will be something appalling. The storm covered the entire range on the east side of the Rocky Mountains, from the British line to New Mexico. The eastern edge lapped over into Nebraska to North Platte and McCook. East of these points no damage was done. Unless the stories are greatly exaggerated, not less than 25 per cent of all the cattle in the range are wiped out.

Trying to Steal a $15,000 Horse.

[From the Newark Sunday Call.] An abortive attempt to steal Mr. R.
Cadogan's stallion Bayonne Prince was made last week. The stallion is at Flemington, Hunterdon County, where he has been for the past season, in the care of W.
Scott Smith. It appears that the thieves entered the stable about 7.30 o'clock and concealed themselves. When the house got quiet they went to work. They collected all the harness and blankets they could find and put them in a sleigh which they took from its place in the rear of the carriage house. The harness they put in a bag, and the blankets were piled on the seat of the sleigh. They took the harness which belonged to another horse and put it on Bayonne Prince and were evidently just about to hitch the horse to the sleigh, when they were disturbed by the brother-in-law of Mr. Smith, who had occasion to go to one of the outhouses near the stable. As he passed the latter he noticed that one of the doors was partly open, and thinking it strange he pulled the door wide open and entered. He had scarcely crossed the threshold when he was felled by a blow delivered sidewise on his neck, which stunned him. While lying on the floor the thieves rifled his pockets, taking $47 in money, and fled. The floor of the carriage house had been covered with blankets to deaden the sound of the horses, and in a few minutes more the thieves would have been on the road behind a horse with a record of 2.21, and valued at $15,000.
With regard to the statement as to the value of the horse, I may say that Mr.
Cadogan refused a flat offer of $10,000 for him last month.

Great Guns.

The Brooklyn Eagle has been studying the possible effects of a bombardment in case of war between Great Britain and the United States. The following facts which it gives concerning the ranges of the great guns of the present day are interesting:— The 119-ton Krupp at an elevation of 45 degrees has a range of 10,184 miles, and at 35 degrees elevation of 9,779 miles. The 110-ton Armstrong has, with an elevation of 45 degrees, a range of 10,331 miles, and of 9,929 miles with an elevation of 35 degrees. The new 63-ton Woolwich gun, with an elevation of 45 degrees, has a range of 10,405 miles, and at 35 degrees 10,003. At 20 degrees elevation the same gun carries a shot eight miles.
Either of these guns with an elevation of 35 degrees could send a shot from the deep water off Coney Island right into the navy yard. The 19-ton wire guns which the new British belted cruisers carry have a still greater range than the 63-ton guns, and with an elevation of 20 degrees could probably send a 400-pound shell a distance of about ten miles. The point at which ships would lie off Coney Island would be six miles from any army point where a land battery could be erected. The Eagle, therefore, wants the Government either to take the navy yard away from Bro'klyn, or to build ships capable of driving away an enemy's ironclads.

Eaten by Cancer.

For several months the Rev. Henry Newton, of Union Point, Conn., suffered slight pains in his left arm and thought it was rheumatism. The other day while he was dressing, the arm broke in two places above the elbow. Examination showed that the bone had been eaten by cancer. The limb has been amputated and Mr. Newton is in a fair way to get well.
Some time ago Wheaton Huntley moved from the East with three marriageable daughters and located by Henry Burchard in Mercer County, Dakota. Burchard had three marriageable boys, and the natural result followed. The three brothers have married the three sisters.
This has been a tremendous winter in the far West. A recent trip of the mail stage from Mount Idaho to Lewiston, Idaho, usually done in twelve hours, was made in four days, and one of the horses died of exhaustion.

Seeking a Friend.

A STRANGE STORY OF KING LUDWIG OF BAVARIA.

Speaking of the celebrated men of Europe who are opposed to the Jews, Sacher-Masoch says: "Goat geniuses are sometimes very narrow-minded." Years ago, writes the Baroness Salvador to the New York Mail, Sacher-Masoch published a novel, in which his hero, a Polish Count, took a deep interest in a youth, so deep an interest as to superintend the education of his protegee, and make him the confidant of his joys and sorrows.
When the pupil was intellectually strong enough to read the more abstruse subjects with his master, the latter discovered that his care and affection had been bestowed upon a woman—and fled. Not long after the publication of this book—but I must tell the story as Sacher-Masoch told it to me:—
"Some time after this book appeared, I received an anonymous letter asking me to make a compact of friendship with the hero—a compact similar to that made by the writer of my novel. The anonymous would-be friend added: 'As I am a man, there is no danger of a similar rupture.' Every line spoke of sincere, unchangeable friendship, and the final phrase was like this: 'To console a stricken soul, to bind again to life a mind that dreams only of suicide.' Of course, I thought the letter came from a woman, and when I received a second asking for an interview, and appointing a little village in Bohemia as the place of rendezvous, with the condition that my eyes should be bandaged, I was certain that only a woman could write in that manner. At the appointed time I reached the house, blinded myself, and anxiously expected—I know not what. One moment after my entrance, the rich, modulated voice of a man said 'Thank you'; and although I confess to a disappointment, I was soon interested in a rehearsal of sorrow of longings for soul communion with a friend, a true friend. At stated intervals during a year these meetings took place. I saw nothing, as with eyes covered I conversed with him. Whenever it was impossible for me to be at the rendezvous, I sent letters according to instructions he had given me to Vienna, Paris and London, and the replies were always written upon paper stamped with a ducal coronet and signed Anatole. One day I was astonished to hear him say, 'I give you permission to look at me. Quickly I raised the bandage and saw the handsome young man I had ever beheld. Offering me his hand he said: 'If you have a little friendship for me, you will understand that you ought to save me. To do so, leave your home; come to mine. You will be rich and powerful.' I was stupefied, but declined Anatole's offer.
Not long after I was examining some photographs in a shop window, when I was startled to see, in a prominent position, that of my friend Anatole. Underneath was written 'S. M., Louis H., Roi de Baviere.' Who knows? Perhaps had I accepted his offer Ludwig might be living at the present time.

Armed by Russia.

ENGLAND LIKELY TO HAVE SERIOUS TROUBLE IN AFGHANISTAN.

Despatches from India state that Russian agents are organizing another rising of the Ghilzai tribes against England's ally, the Ameer of Afghanistan. The Ghilzai chiefs have received large supplies of Russian arms, ammunition and treasure, and are acting under the direction of Russian officers. The enormous concentration of Russian troops and war material at Merz, Samarcand and strategic points threatening Herat, indicate an early Russian advance in the direction of Herat, and give color to the reported subsidizing of the Ghilzais by the Russians. It has leaked out that the Indian government has warned the Ameer cabinet that the Ameer will shortly require effective support, and asked for sanction to push forward troops to Candahar for that purpose.
The application is under consideration, and in the mean time the Indian authorities are taking matters in their own hands, as usual, and making the necessary dispositions of troops and stores in anticipation of orders for an advance.

Victimized Many Women.

A GAY DE BEVER COMES TO THE END OF HIS TETHER.

Edson Pease, who, in Elmira, New York, has been known as Charles B. Thompson, is in jail there for winning the confidence and affections of a wealthy lady of Havana, and borrowing money of her under the name of A. B. Horton and then abandoning her. The woman is Mrs. Deia Messenger, said to be a "grass" widow. Pease had served five years in a Pennsylvania penitentiary for deserting one wife and taking another, and not long ago married a reputable Christian woman in Elmira, while still having a wife living in Ithaca. The Elmira lady at once began an action for divorce as soon as she learned his perfidious character. When the officers began searching for Pease to serve the papers on him, he shaved off his heavy beard, trimmed down his moustache and dyed his hair and eyebrows, assuming the name of Horton.
While thus changed, he visited Havana and made his conquest. Horton, not knowing that his identity had been discovered, said that he intended to marry Mrs. Messenger, and claims that all the money he got from her she gave to him.

A citizen at Allentown, Pa., who owned a fine span of horses that he used in his business, was much troubled because his neighbors often asked to borrow the horses evenings and Sunday's for pleasure driving.
The owner, too good natured to say no, at length hit upon a plan that worked to a charm. He traded his horses for a span mules.

The appearance of the great Arctic white owl in the territory bordering along the lakes, is among the notable phenomena this year. It is a large bird, white as snow, with a wide stretch of wing. Along Lake Erie a number have been killed, and in the interior counties some specimens have been taken. In Randolph township, Crawford County, one was shot last week that measured five feet from tip to tip of wings, and another killed by a farmer measured four feet ten and one half inches.
