According to records he kept, Mr. Douglas estimated cost of production per acre of potatoes was $112 to $118. Average production of potatoes in the Province was 209 bushels to the acre although some farms grew 350 and even 400 bushels to the acre.

Although the annual production of the Island was some ten million bushels, there was frost-proof storage facilities for only one million bushels hundred thousand bushels, Mr. Douglas said.

Storage & Marketing

"I believe the grant of $100,000 which we receive from the Federal Government as well as the assistance from the Provincial Government should be used to the fullest extent possible to provide warehousing at the points where they are needed," Mr. Douglas said.

"Marketing of potatoes could be better regulated with more adequate warehouse storage space. We need an orderly marketing system to put an end to the cut-throat competition that has been going on amongst the dealers."

Mr. Douglas mentioned that when in Toronto earlier this year, he found P.E.I. potatoes selling for as little as $1.18 per 75-pound bag, which meant that the dealer in Prince Edward Island might be getting as little as 60 cents a bag.

"The industry was hard hit, he added, by the increase in freight charges which had mounted 16 cents per 100 pounds in the past 18 months.

Prince Edward Island, Mr. Douglas said, had mastered the arts of growing and grading potatoes but had yet to learn how to market them in an orderly manner. He paid tribute to the efficiency of the potato inspection service developed through the efforts of Mr. Peppin of the Seed Branch and of Chester E. Shaw, chief table stock inspector.

"To solve our problems," Mr. Douglas said, "we should have more and better storage facilities and an orderly system of marketing."

Raps Dietitians

Mr. McLure told the House that despite assertions to the contrary, he did not believe there was over-production of potatoes in Prince Edward Island or in Canada as a whole. Per capita consumption of potatoes in Canada had dropped nearly a bushel a year over the last 25 years. If the present-day consumption could be brought back to the normal of 25 years ago, the entire F.E.I. crop could be marketed in Canada.

"Mr. McLure blamed the 'dietitians, the faddists, and others' who claimed that potatoes were fattening." This theory, he said had been disproved by farmers who had fed potatoes to hogs and found that they were much less fattening than other foods.

"Today what is needed," he said, "is advertising as to the food value of the wonderful potato. Let us break down the ideas of the dietitians and faddists. Let us tell the ladies that if they expect a virile race of men they must feed them potatoes. It is not a question of over-production but that consumption is declining. I hope the minister will see that advertising is carried on to place before the people the benefits of the wonderful food which is not a luxury but a real food."

Cutworms

fields was becoming thin in places and few at a time thought it might have been due to the hot dry weather. Upon investigation, however, he was amazed to find numerous cut worms beneath the ground.

Another farmer saw 17 acres of his grain partially eaten away by the pest. He replanted his grain at an additional cost of $170.00, ten dollars an acre, five for grain seed and five for hay seed.

Mr. Canon advised Mr. Carver to prepare some poisoned bait to eliminate the cutworms. The latter applied one application Monday and yesterday found that many of the larger worms had died or were dying. None of the smaller worms appeared to be affected.

This was thought due to the fact that the night was too cold for the worms to stay above ground. They nearly always feed at night.

The worms were first detected last year in the Savage Harbour area around the end of June. Their effects are expected to be more widespread this year as they appear to be at work at any earlier date.

Mr. Canon advises the examination of all grain fields as the presence of the cutworm may not be noticed until considerable damage is done. He also urges the application of the bran bait to infected fields. This bait is composed of 25 pounds of bran, one pound paris green and about two and one half gallons of water.

The month of June is the hey day of the cutworm as he is then in the larvae stage. He appears to eat out circular patches in the grain and in places leaves nothing but the bare red soil.

Presbyterians Continue Sessions

MONTREAL, June 13 (CP)—Revision of the Ukrainian Bible, a work undertaken by the British Foreign Bible Society in Canada, will require $1,000,000, the Presbyterian General Assembly was told today.

The figure was given by Rev. W. H. Hudspeth, general secretary of the Society, before the 76th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Mr. Hudspeth said there are 350,000 Ukrainians in Canada, 500,000 in the United States and 20,000,000 in the south of Russia. There is great demand for a revised Bible and work on the Old Testament has begun in Canada, he said.

"We are faced with wider opportunities than we have ventured to think of before," said Mr. Hudspeth.

He outlined the need for Scriptures throughout the world, particularly in countries where a literacy campaign is teaching many to read, and said that as yet no Bible houses had been closed in China. The Society is still printing Bibles in Shanghai and Hong Kong.

Earlier the Assembly registered a protest against abuse of Christian liberty through excessive use of alcohol.

The report of the Evangelical and Social Action Board, presented by Rev. E. C. McCullagh of Dunnville, Ont., recommended that the nature and function of alcohol be taught in public and high schools and universities as well as in Sunday schools.

"We recognize that the use of alcohol in many instances is due to a failure of the individual to meet the outward and inward stresses of personal and modern life."

Dr. W. L. Detlor of Trail, B. C., said "the dominant and official position of our Church has been that of total abstinence."

Mr. McCullagh said there was no support of total abstinence in the Scriptures and "total abstinence is not the position of the Presbyterian Church in Canada."

DECLARES MONEY

British Columbia's gift of 1,600,000 boxes of apples last year. It was a discussion of apple markets last night which produced Mr. Gardiner's suggestion for "direct" talk to Britain.

Today, he said he understood that 50,000 boxes of apples had been given to schools and institutions in Britain. But what had happened to the remainder of the apple gift from B. C. Tree Fruits Limited had not been clear.

"If they were sold to the people of Britain at the usual price," he said, "I just want to ask one question: Who ought to have the returns?"

Mr. Gardiner reported that there had been no deal yet in selling food to Britain until 1947, when "it was intimated" that Britain wanted to cut out the purchase of all foodstuffs from Canada except wheat.

Canada replied that this would be "most difficult" but she did cooperate "in every possible way" by trying to find other markets and by consuming the food at home.

Until now, Canada had been able to market food production, but she was not always going to be able to eat all that she could produce.

The British Commonwealth was the best organization in the world to promote peace and it was "most important" that Canada's relations with Britain, the centre of the organization, should be of the "most cordial kind."

"I do not think there is any dollar-sterling question in the world or any dollar-sterling problem as between Canada and Great Britain that is more important than the maintenance of good relationships between those two areas."

A Small Problem

Last year, it would have taken only $30,000,000 for Britain to have satisfied all the demands of Canadian agriculture as to the sale of food. If that amount had been proffered, under the plane of co-operation in solving British problems as Canadian problems, it would not have had to say half of it.

"Our people would have been perfectly satisfied that they were being treated properly and their people would have been perfectly satisfied that they were getting all the surplus food there was from this country."

"When this problem is such a small one, I think all this talk about it being caused by the fact that there is some dollar-sterling problem just is not the case at all. It was a matter of getting into the minds of one or two people, probably we could settle the question so far as Great Britain and Canada are concerned."

Mr. Drew said Canadians could not look without some concern at published statements that some of the foods which Canada had been supplying to Britain "now are being bought from countries behind the iron curtain." There may be some explanation.

He said there was no doubt that the people of Britain wanted to trade with the people of Canada. "The statement is made that there are some people who should be spoken to in a much firmer way than they have been spoken to before. I think we should know whether those are members of the present Government of Great Britain, and I do not know why we should be left to guess as to who they are."

Mr. Gardiner should indicate whether there was "any relationship whatever to the insistence upon the acceptance of certain of this college.

"It is fitting that the Alumni Association should have erected this memorial tablet, to be placed with, and indeed attached to a similar tablet erected by the Alumni a generation ago at the close of the First World War. The very arrangement of this double memorial is appropriate, in that it recognized the fact that these two outbreaks of armed violence which demanded such sacrifices for their suppression were in reality separate phases of the same conflict. A conflict which is still with us, even though the din of battle for the present is silenced, and in which we all are called to do our part for the ultimate triumph of justice and goodness and truth."

"The men of this college whose valour is commemorated here are a part of a great company to whom we owe the preservation, for the time, of everything that we value most. They belong among those who in the hour of crisis answered the call of duty, knowing well the price that might be required, and fully prepared to pay that price if such should be their lot."

"Well do I remember my interviews with these students, after the outbreak of hostilities in the recent war, as they came one by one to tell me of their decision to enlist and of their reasons for so doing. They did not think of themselves as heroes. They were simply doing what they felt they ought to do in the situation confronting them, and with full realization of all that their decision involved."

"That was the spirit in which they went forth; and it is not surprising that they left a record of gallantry and fearless devotion to duty, of which all who love this College are very proud."

In Honor Of All

"Most of them in the good providence of God have been spared to return to us. They mingle with us once again in the peaceful pursuits of our daily lives, and we do not say much to them about the honor with which we regard them. But that feeling is there nevertheless. The inscription on this tablet is not just a collection of empty words. In honour of all students and alumni who offered themselves in this cause—in defence of all that is dearest to us, when these high values were at stake and vital issues were trembling in the balance. Let our returned veterans be assured that those simple words mean exactly what they say."

"Today, however, our thoughts are primarily of the two fine lads who have not returned. I am not going to eulogize them here. They are young men, like their fellow-students who went forth with them, whose lives were fully dedicated to the service of Christ, and who felt in those dark days that for them, fidelity to their Christian convictions left them with only one thing to do. And so they made their choice. They kept their faith, in all reverence and in sober truth we can say of them what the Master said of Himself, as he faced the Cross which was to be the price of his fidelity to the will of God, that no man took their lives from them. They laid them down of themselves. And thus we have inscribed beneath their names that simple sentence: 'They died that we might live.' They too have given their lives for others' sakes. And we are comforted today in the assurance that no such sacrifice is ever made in vain. It has a real redemptive value. And faith like this,—faith that will not shrink in any crisis or emergency, but that will endure to the end, even if need be to the giving up of life itself, is the victory that overcometh the world."

"Faithful unto death, they have received a crown of life, and they summon us to live and serve as they did, for the things of God's kingdom. May divine grace be given to us, and to successive generations of students here as they stand in reverence before this tablet, to make full response to its silent appeal, and in humble dependence on divine strength to follow in their trail."

Calls Schuman Plan Sketch Of Great Idea

LONDON, June 13 (CP)—Prime Minister Attlee today hailed the Schuman plan as the "sketch of a great idea," but said Britain is not ready to join in it.

In a statement to the Commons, the Prime Minister said Britain would not agree in advance to the idea of setting up a high authority with power to dictate basic industrial policies to member countries.

The Labor Government policy thus outlined basically parallels views on European unity made public Monday night by the national executive committee of the Labor Party.

Reuters News Agency said Attlee pledged British leadership in even-greater pooling of Western resources under the Atlantic Pact. He made it clear that Britain is thinking along the lines of a gradual surrender of sovereignty, not in the narrower field of European union but in the broader pattern of the Atlantic community.

Only one hint of a Conservative challenge to the Government's policy came during the day, when Winston Churchill demanded a plan clearly debate on the pool plan. Herbert Morrison, Government House leader, promised a debate "as soon as adequate detail is available."

The Labor Party manifesto drew expressions of "astonishment" from official spokesmen of the French Foreign Office in Paris.

In Washington, American officials privately expressed disappointment at Britain's rejection of the pooling plan.

Maritimers In Ottawa Form Club

This project was recently launched by a group of enthusiastic Maritimers who thought the idea of an occasional get-together too good to keep to themselves. The objectives of the Association will be determined by the wishes of its members. So far, its purpose is simply defined: to enable Maritimers in Ottawa to meet old friends and to make new ones. It is hoped that we can make it easier for newcomers from the Maritimes to feel at home here in Ottawa.

The first meeting of "The Maritimers" was held on May 5, in the Carnegie Library. The following officers were elected: Hon. President — Fred A. Malatall. President — Dan Wallace. Vice-presidents — Nfld. — Miss A. E. Dawe. N. S. — Warren McCulloch, P. E. I. — Harold Black, N. B. Asst. Commissioner, L. H. Nicholson. Secretary-Treasurer — Roy McLeod, 168 Hawthorne Ave., Ottawa.

Chairman, Entertainment Committee — Jos. P. Connolly. Chairman, Public Relations — Neil MacNeil. Chairman, Membership Committee — A. R. Rasley.

The Executive met on May 19, and decided to get the Association rolling at once in order to be going strong by the Fall. Sights were set for some sort of gathering in June. The nature of this event will depend on the number of those replying to our Questionnaire.

JOHNS-MANVILLE ASBESTOS GUARDS NEW PIPE LINE

From the foot of the Rockies to the head of the lakes, Alberta oil will flow through 1150 miles of underground pipe wrapped in ASBESTOS. This major project is now under way. As fast as the pipe is welded a huge amount of asbestos felts over a covering of enamel and glass wrap. Johns-Manville Asbestos Pipe-Line Felts will protect the major portion of this line, as they do over 50,000 miles of oil and gas pipe line throughout the world. Made from a mineral base, these Johns-Manville Felts provide a tough, rustproof shield against earth load, soil stress and acid or alkali types of soils. Protecting Canada's huge oil pipe line, is yet another outstanding example of Johns-Manville Asbestos at work!

Reserve Judgment In Witness Case

OTTAWA, June 13 (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada today reserved judgment on a three-year argument between the Attorney-General and the Attorney-General of Quebec involving Aime Boucher on a charge of seditious libel.

Nine judges of the court now will deliberate their decision, not expected until next September. The result will climax a test case which opened in 1947 when Boucher was sentenced to one month's imprisonment at St. Joseph De Beauce for distributing a pamphlet entitled "Quebec's Burning Hate For God and Christ and Freedom is the Shame of All Canada."

The pamphlet alleged acts of violence against the Jehovah's Witnesses and said the police of St. Joseph De Beauce had not attempted to stop them.

Fredericton Plans To Revamp Water System

FREDERICTON, June 13 (CP)—A $600,000 plan for revamping this capital's water system will begin early next year, it was learned today.

City Council last night approved the plans of a Toronto firm that surveyed the system. It was understood a call for tenders will be made early next year and the Council will ask the next session of the legislature for authority to borrow $600,000.

Tentative plans call for the re-creation of a 2,000,000-gallon high level reservoir, an 18-inch main from the pumping station to the reservoir, and a 12-inch cross-town feeder main on Charlotte Street.
