LOVED ADVENTURE.

WILLIAM FENIMORE COOPER HAS SEEN A THING OR TWO.

A Career Filled With Hairbreadth Escapes - His Experiences as a Cowboy and an African Explorer - Greasers and African Chiefs His Game.

Few men have had more hairbreadth escapes than Senior William Fenimore Cooper, who for many years lived near the extinct volcano of Popocatepetl, in the province of Orizaba, Mexico.

The accident caused him to quit Mexico for the United States, and he has been here ever since. Some of the incidents in his career show that he has nerve, a deadly aim and a heart for every fate.

He is a native of the Tar Heel State, and when 16 years old he went to Texas to become a cowboy.

Both ran for their horses, for they knew it was a life and death race. The greaser was a sprinter, and was Cooper. Each reached his horse almost at the same moment, and each mounted simultaneously.

At this period the subject of this sketch concluded he had played cowboy long enough and came north, where he during the month of October 2001 persons sailed for Canada, against 1769 in the preceding October.

THROWING RICE.

A Practice That One Railroad is Trying to Stop.

"Showering newly-married couples is a very old-time custom and will probably continue for all time to come and it is a harmless custom. It is fun for the friends of the bride and groom doing the showering, and not harmful to the showered, but in some places it is a decided annoyance to others," said a traveling man.

"On railroad trains for instance, when the bride and groom get into the car and in their haste to do their work before the train starts not only shower the newly-married, but everybody who chances to sit within two or three seats of them (and I am one of the victims), to say nothing of covering the floor and cushioning with rice. At some stations the friends are not allowed to pass out of the depot waiting-room and the rice is thrown as the couple leave, and others going out at the same time receive a liberal share. The floor is also covered with rice. The New York Central railroad prohibits the throwing of rice in or about the cars or about the depots, but little attention has been paid to it, and the throwing is done so suddenly that the depot attendants are unable to prevent it. Yet it does not occur as often now as formerly, and the railroad people are in hopes that it will cease entirely in the near future."

Why He Talked to Himself.

There is an Irish porter employed in a large commission house in New York, one of the kind that will make a witty reply to any sort of question. He is very fond of expressing his views in general, and has great admiration of his arguments. If he fails to get a listener he will talk to himself in lieu of something better. A member of the firm, being annoyed one day at his constant muttering, which he was unfortunate enough to hear, sent for him.

"See here, John, did it ever occur to you that your constant talk and muttering is a great annoyance to people that happen to be around? Why on earth do you chatter away to yourself, anyhow?"

"Sure, I have two reasons for doing that. 'Two reasons? Well, what are they?' 'One of them is that I like to talk to a sensible man, and the other is that I like to hear a sensible man talk.'"

MENHADEN OIL. The oily character of the menhaden is familiar. It is sought for its oil, which is tried out in factories. Menhaden fishermen use purse nets, which are tarred to preserve them. To keep their hands from sticking to the tarred nets they roll them on a freshly caught menhaden, handling it something as they would a cake of soap. So oily is the menhaden that the simple pressure thus applied is enough to bring through the scales oil sufficient for the purpose.

To Catch Them Both. "I think I shall try the two volume system with my next novel," said Timmins. "Isn't that sort of thing out of date?" asked Simmons.

But this is a new scheme. I'm going to marry them off happily at the end of the first volume in the good old style, you know. That will catch the mothers. In the second volume the villain, the elopement and the divorce appear. That will catch the daughters. Isn't that great?—Indianapolis Journal.

BREACHES IN THE WALL. The Weak Spot, the Kidneys—They must be Guarded as Life Advances—Defence Strengthened by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Pony Horse, Oct. 26 (Special)—Citizens called on here to vouch for correctness of the following statement without an exception endorsed it as true. Mr. Chas. Gilchrist, Chief of Police and government fishery overseer of his own case said:— "For ten years my distress increased until the doctor called it Diabetes. At times my suffering was intense, and medicine I took did no good. At last a friend assured me that Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. A few boxes have kept that promise, and I thank these pills for a perfect and I believe permanent cure."
