

Retired Sea-Captains Liked to Drop Anchor

Souris at this time was an important port of call for the S.S. St. Olaf which ran between Picton and the Magdalen Islands.

Angus McLellan was a ship's carpenter. His daughter Maggie worked for many years in Leard's tailor shop as did her husband, Jim Swallow.

Three MacDonalDs headed the retired list in 1898. They were Captain Billie, Captain A.R. and Captain Dominic, all of whom were dominant personalities of their day and story-tellers who could polish the truth and sometimes even embroider it.

The latter made carriages and spinning wheels of considerable merit. Still others who worked in wood but in the highly skilled trade of coopering were John Mitchell who lived on Cooper's Hill, James Gorman and Patrick St. John.

They included William Mallett, John Pyke who is still living and visits Souris every summer, and F.H. White who was also one of the magistrates.

Harold Dingwall at one time in partnership with W.R. Dingwell had a sash and door factory on what is now the vacant lot south of Mrs. Michael Poole's house.

Souris of sixty years ago was not just houses and stores and workmen. It was a village more self-contained than today though nearly the same population.

Chief Petty Officer, Robert C. Jenkins of the Royal Canadian Navy, stationed at H.M.C.S. Stadacona, in Halifax, N.S., recently spent several days visiting his father, Mr. A.E. Jenkins.

Ship-launchings paled into insignificance before tea-parties and the tea-parties of St. Mary's Church, Souris, were generally agreed to be among the biggest and best on the Island at this time.
