Pure Spices are Profitable

But bad spice is abominable. This is a truism that no competent housekeeper should forget. Half the trouble of cooking is past if you get the right brand of Spice, and while there are many that are fairly good, it is always safest to take one which is invariably uniform. That one is

New Inventoin.

I have invented and patented on July 24, 1897, a new straw elevator and shaker attached to any fanners. It cleans all grain perfectly first cleaning, all grain is taken out of the straw. It has been well tested. It only takes about 1/2 of the power for to drive it of any other machine for that purpose in the market. I ask every intending purchaser to see one of the Week's shakers before purchasing any other. Any person infringing on the patent will be dealt with according to the law. I have appointed Mr. Walter Grant of Mill View, Lot 49, as manufacturing agent. He will receive orders; also myself

TWO TOILERS.

Two men toiled side by side from sun to sun,
And both were poor;
Both sat with children when the day was done
About their door.

One saw the beautiful in crimson cloud
And shining moon;
The other, with his head in sadness bowed,
Made night of noon.

One loved each tree and flower and singing bird
On mount or plain;
No music in the soul of one was stirred
By leaf or rain.

One saw the good in every fellow man,
And hoped the best;
The other marvelled at his master's plan,
And doubt confessed.

One, having heaven above and heaven below;
Was satisfied;
The other, discontented, lived in woe,
And hopeless died.

Unappreciative.

"Palette felt disappointed because you didn't attend his exhibition of paintings."

"I was detained."

"But he kept the gallery open very late."

"Yes, that's what detained me until a little later."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not a Fit Maxim For Him.

"My friend," said the kindly old gentleman who likes to make acquaintances while travelling, "you should follow my example. I strive to learn something new every day."

"No," was the answer of the quiet young man. "That may do in your line of business. But if you were doing a vaudeville turn with me you'd realize that audiences seem disappointed if they don't get what they have been taught to expect."—Washington Star.

A CHARACTER.

He sowed and hoped for reaping.
A happy man and wise.
The clouds—they did his weeping;
The wind—it sighed his sighs.

He made what fortune brought him
The limit of desire.
Thanked God for shade in summer days,
In winter time for fire.

When tempest, as with vengeful rod,
His earthly mansion left,
On the blank sod he still thanked God
Life and the land were left.

Content, his earthly race he ran
And died—so people say—
Some ten years later than the man
Who worried his life away.

THE INFANCY OF RAILWAYS.

Curiosities of the Early Appliances—Popular Attitude Toward Them.

At the Workmen's college, Great Ormond street, a lecture was delivered by Mr. W. M. Acworth on "The Infancy of Railways." The lecturer mentioned that the queen had been five years on the throne before she entered a railway train. Practically the first railway passengers traveled about 70 years ago. That was on the Stockton and Darlington railway, but the passenger carriage was then drawn by a horse. The idea of a permanent way for haulage purposes was very old, for those who had been at the ruins of Pompeii would have noticed slabs of stone on either side of the road and marks on them where the carts were sent along in order to make the haulage easier. Somewhat the same idea was taken up in England and in the Harz mountains some centuries ago. Gradually the stone had been replaced by iron, and about 1874 the wonderful discovery of Sir H. Bessemer in the manufacture of steel led to the rails being made of steel. The introduction of the railway into this country was regarded, especially by the country landowners, as quite an innovation. The surveyors for the companies were often ducked in horseponds and even fired at while making surveys.

Many towns at the present day, such as Lichfield and Northampton, bitterly regretted the opposition shown to railway enterprise in its early days; for the result has been that the main lines passed some distance away from them. The reason why the main line of the Great Western did not pass through Windsor was the opposition of the provost and fellows of Eton college, who refused to allow any station to be built on their estate. At first the rich classes, who had been in the habit of traveling in their own coaches, would not mix with the common herd in a railway train, but used to have their coaches put on railway trucks, and so literally rode in their own vehicles. Even later it was considered quite a crime for people who could afford to travel first or second class to go third. On one occasion the officials on one line were known to hire sweeps to empty their coat bags into a third class carriage which was known to be used by persons who could pay a higher fare. Since 1840, with the great development in railway enterprise, all this had been changed, and it could be practically said that the fares had been reduced by one-half and the speed doubled in the 60 years.—London Times.

Paternal Trust.

"Yep," said Father Cornstossel to the relative whom he was visiting, "Joslar's away studying some more."

"You are devoting a great deal of attention to his schooling."

"Yes," was the answer. "But Joslar kin stand it. Joslar is a reg'lar intellectual athlete. Now, when I want to think, I've got to git out my specs an' sit down with the paper after the day's over, an' kind o' git a runnin' start, but Joslar, he kin stop right in the middle of anything he happens to be doin' an' think if he feels like it. I used to have to keep an extra hired man 'cause Joslar 'ud every once in awhile git took with a notion to sit down under an apple tree an' think, an' it didn't make no difference how warm the weather was. So I concluded that it'd be a pity if he was to run out o' thinkin' material an' I'm sendin' 'im to school some more. Only this time it's goin' to be somethin' different, somethin' that'll give 'im occupation along with his thinkin' an' help 'im earn a livin' if he should ever feel so inclined. He's learnin' all about drugs."

"How is he getting along?"

"Fine," replied the father as he took a letter from his pocket. "See what's wrote at the top o' the fust page? That's what shows he's gettin' along fine."

"I don't see anything except the words 'Pharmaceutical college.'"

"That's them. I ain't no expert in handwritin', but that there's what makes me proud of Joslar. When I see a boy write that word right off, without takin' his pen off'n the paper onest, as is plain to be seen was done here, I off my hat an' tell 'im that nothin' ain't too good fur 'im."—Washington Star.

This is Sleepless Hall!
It has 210 windows, yet its electric light bill is $300.00 per month.

It contains 48,000 square feet of floor space, employs 600 tailors and tailoresses, cuts up 20,000 yards of cloth weekly, and makes 5000 gentlemen's garments every six days.

It has 120 electric sewing machines, and 28 electric pressers, as well as electric cutting knives, and button hole machines, which each do the work of 28 people daily.

Its tweeds and linings are bought direct from the mills in thousand yard lots, instead of in 2 1/2 yard lengths as the tailor buys them from wholesalers.

It costs "Sleepless Hall" $2.50 for the making of a dress suit which would cost a tailor $9.00 for making the coat alone.

This is why no tailor can sell a suit equal to a $15.00 "Fit-Reform" for less than $25.00 to $35.00
