The bidding:
West North East South
1♥ Dble. Pass 1♠
2♥ 3♣ Pass 4♣

Opening lead—king of hearts.

The bidding by North-South was just right. North had too much of a hand to merely overcall with one spade, and the way to show the extra strength was to make use of the informatory double. This bid tells partner the doubler has at least an opening bid. The follow-up bid of three spades not only confirms the values previously shown, but tells of additional values beyond those required for the informatory double. South correctly understood North's messages. The three spade bid was not forcing, but it strongly urged South to continue to game unless his hand was devoid of merit. No such interpretation could be properly placed on South's hand. Aside from the six points in high cards, of which North could not be aware, South had a good five card trump suit, as well as a doubleton. These factors called for affirmative action, not the display of the white feather.

West took the king and ace of hearts, and shifted to the ten of diamonds. Declarer won with the ace in dummy. The queen of spades was led, and allowed to go to West's king. West led the six of clubs, dummy winning with the ace. After drawing trumps, South played the queen of diamonds, ruffed a heart, and then discarded his two club losers on dummy's two diamonds. North-South scored a game, but it was West's error in defense which made it possible.

At trick three West should have led a club instead of a diamond. There is no danger in leading away from the king, since if East has the queen of clubs the king is always dead, and the declarer is being given nothing which he does not already have. If East has a diamond trick it will not get away from him, but if East has the queen of clubs it is urgent that club suit be immediately attacked.

A club lead on the third trick puts South out of business. There is no recovery. The timing factor again asserts its importance in the play.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters are apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Grouse. You see, while they are great eaters of insects, they do not depend on them altogether. They love seeds of many kinds, and different grains. These things they can get all winter because they know just where to look for them. Then, too they haven't the right kind of wings for flying long distances.

With most of the feathered folk the young had already gone out into the Great World to make places for themselves. They did not depend on father and mother to show them the way to the Sunny South. They went by themselves, usually a lot of them together. But Bob White and Mrs. Bob kept their family with them. Their children now were as big as they were, but Bob and Mrs. Bob still watched over them as if they were not yet able to look out for themselves, which of course they were. During the day they fed together. Usually Bob White led the flock to the feeding ground. There was plenty to eat these days. A full stomach makes for happiness and contentment. Those Bob Whites were a happy and contented family. Now and then Bob would whistle just for the joy of it. He had to do something to show how happy he was. So he would whistle.

BEDTIME STORIES

The Happy Family

In unity of family life, there's neither place nor cause for strife.

BOB WHITE.

Summer was almost over. Before very long the Green Forest would be green only in part. Much of it would be clothed in beautiful shades of yellow and red and brown. For a little while the year would be at its loveliest.

Already the Swallow folk had begun to move South. They gathered in great flocks, coming from far and wide so as to be together on the long journey. Skimmer and Mrs. Skimmer, who had nested in the Old Orchard, had already gone with one of those flocks. One day they had been skimming just above the grass back and forth, this way and that way. The next day they were nowhere to be seen. Skimmer had one time explained to Peter Rabbit why it was they went so early.

"You should know, Peter Rabbit, by this time, that Mrs. Skimmer and I get nearly all our food in the air. As long as there are plenty of flying insects, we can live well. But if Jack Frost should come unexpectedly some night and put an end to all the flying insects, we might starve to death in just a very little while. So we begin to go South before there is any danger of not having food enough on the way," said Skimmer.

Many other feathered folk were getting ready to leave when it became necessary. Some of them would leave early because they would have a very, very long distance to fly. Others who would not have to go so far would stay a little longer before starting. And some there were who would not go away at all. The Bob Whites were among these. Some folks call them Quail, but Bob White is a better name. They would stay all winter just as would Mr. and Mrs.
