

MR. AND MRS. D. MACDONALD

Lovely Autumn Wedding Solemnized In Souris

St. Mary's Church, Souris, was the setting on September 21 for the marriage of Miss Marina Malone, R. N., to Mr. Dunstan MacDonald of Mermaid. Reverend Francis Cameron, cousin of the groom, performed the double-ring ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass.

The wedding music was under the direction of Rev. St. George, organist of the St. Mary's Choir, and the soloist, Mr. Frank MacIntyre, director of the choir of St. Dunstan's Basilica sang very effectively many beautiful hymns during the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by Mr. T. F. McEneaney of Cambridge, Mass., wore a gown of ivory satin with a modified off-the-shoulder neckline embroidered with lace and enhanced with iridescent sequins and a sash of pearls. Long sleeves tapered over the fingers and designed with a fitted bodice and a bouffant skirt terminating in a chapel-length train. Her fingertip veil of nylon tulle was attached to a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a cascade of white carnations with white satin streamers.

Miss Patricia MacDonald, R. N., the bride's only attendant, wore a ballerina tulle dress of stone blue tulle and carried a nosegay of pink carnations with rainbow streamers.

Gerald MacDonald was best man for his bride. The usher was Albig MacDonald and Einar MacDonalid.

A reception followed at the Seaview Hotel. Reverend Edwin Sieve proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by Gerald MacDonald.

Mrs. MacDonald, an alumna of St. Mary's Convent, Souris, and a former student of St. Joseph's Convent, Charlottetown, is a graduate of the Charlottetown Hospital School of Nursing. Her husband attended Prince of Wales College.

Upon congratulations and good wishes the happy couple left on a honeymoon to Maine. For her traveling costume the bride wore a custom tailored, corded brown suit with briar accessories.

They will reside in Charlottetown where Mr. MacDonald is employed by the Department of Transport.

MARY HAWORTH

Drinks Before Each Meal

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to ask you a question about so-called social drinking. I am a former widow, middle-aged, married of recent years to a man in his 30s.

All my life I have been people drink and I never have thought it wrong. Both my parents drank lightly, and in my younger years, during my first marriage, I was surrounded by party drinkers. That is, Saturday night and special occasion drinkers who might go for a week or weeks without a drink.

My present husband is home for lunch; a d seven days a week, year in and year out; he takes one or maybe two very strong cocktails before lunch. I mix my own wine and I so, I know they are strong—two, three or four ounces of liquor.

RARELY INTRODUCED

Comes 5 o'clock in the afternoon, it is highball time, wherever we may be. On occasion, on a business trip, at home, the liquor is there or carried there for a pre-dinner drink or drinks in generous measure.

In several years, I have seen him "high" perhaps four or five times. He rarely drinks after dinner, and to date there has been no problem. However, I find it difficult to understand this type of drinking. It would seem to me that he is unable to stop—and surely this is a form of alcoholism.

John claims it is purely habit, like smoking. What is your opinion? Do you think such drinking is progressive? I've no desire to create a problem where none exists. But I've seen so much of this type of drinking in our part of the country that I would appreciate your opinion that perhaps I might better understand.—V. R.

WIFED FOR TROUBLE

DEAR V. R.: As I get the pitch of the alcoholic personality, you might say that he for she, she for he, is a condition that, though, in the event it comes in contact with alcoholic drink, is likely for some reason or other, this person has a predisposition to become addicted to alcoholism. If social drinking is attempted, in his case, alcohol in almost any amount plays havoc with the standard setup that should function in the service of self-control.

Your present husband's moderately heavy daily drinking is something else. It suggests that he isn't predisposed to alcoholism; but only that he has, as he says, "a drinking problem." He has cultivated a false appetite, and cordially applies himself to satisfying it. This is known as social drinking, which may, or may not, become a serious habit.

In James Free's book Just One More—Coward—McCann, addressed to prohibition drinkers, Chapter 17 is devoted to a discussion of safe social drinking. To be on the safe side, every social drinker is advised to practice five precautions, to wit:

1. Accept the fact that alcoholism is a progressive disease that can overtake anybody who drinks—even you.
2. Firmly decide to take any steps necessary to ensure that this illness doesn't overtake you.
3. Embrace a specific policy of absolute moderation, with no exceptions, if you wish to play it safe.
4. Set an absolute limit on the number of drinks you will take on any drinking occasion.
5. Establish certain definite nights each week, when you will not drink at all. Schedule your

Hold Shower For Newlyweds

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Proutie were tendered a shower at their home at Loyalist Road on Thursday evening. The shower was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Crabbe and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Clove, with approximately 110 guests present.

To the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mrs. Dale Proutie, Mr. and Mrs. Proutie were escorted to decorated chairs by Mrs. Ralph Crabbe and Mr. Kenneth Coles.

Dr. A. E. Betts called the gathering to order, after which a nicely worded address was read by Mrs. Kenneth Coles and the presentation of a well filled purse and gifts were presented by Mr. Everett Clove.

On behalf of his bride, Grant expressed thanks to their friends and neighbours. The guests joined in a social evening and stick with the schedule.

STICKS NECK OUT

If a man habitually drinks thirstily and refuses to consider the above precautions—for any reason whatsoever—Mr. Free sticks his neck out (as he crabs) and wagers. Either that man is unaware of the risks, or he already has an obsessive need of alcohol (ingrained by habit), or he has already lost control, without being ready to admit it.

And if this wager makes you drinking readers mad, well, you've had it, friends, says Mr. Free. Might as well step to the phone right now and put in your call to Alcoholics Anonymous.

Mr. Free is a worldly man, not a parrot theorist. He is head of his own advertising agency, with offices in seven cities. Also he is an avid avocet farmer in southern California, an oil man in a Texas, a sportsman and author of Training Your Retriever, and—more recently—a Yale-trained speech therapist and consultant on problems of alcoholism. Read his book, get to an evaluation of your husband's drink pattern.
