Miscouche a growing, bustling community

Miscouche can be said of several outstanding projects, some being inter works, being carried out in that community.

Perhaps the most noteworthy undertaking was the building of Miscouche Museum. It was started and completed under winter works and officially opened to public Aug. 1964. The museum, which is on display several hundred items, was visited by 3,000 people last year. A sewerage system was completed in late 1964 at a cost of $75,000. One hundred and five 'hook ups' are on this system and up to a total of 142 homes can be connected.

In connection with the sewerage system, a fire reservoir has been built for Miscouche Fire Department.

At the intersection in the heart of Miscouche, a new post office has been erected. Contractors for the federal project which started last fall, were Fitzgerald and Snow of Summerside. The staff numbers three with one Post Mistress and two letter carriers.

Like most communities, Miscouche has a Senior Citizens Home. The home as started in Dec. 1964 and is now nearing completion. It is being constructed on the same principle as that in Summerside. It consists of four units with room for 80 elderly people to be cared for. Provisions have been made to expand the Miscouche Home. Northumberland Const. of Egmont Bay are the contractors. Total cost is estimated at $28,000.

PARK PROJECTS
Residents of Miscouche will have two parks. On the south side of Miscouche, Sandy Cove Park is being established and a Fish and Game area will be set up on Miscouche's north side. Although the two winter works projects have been labored on for the past two years, they are not yet completed.

Along with the setting up of picnic tables, a five acre pond stocked with trout by the Department of Fisheries will supply a colorful attraction at Sandy Cove.

Work on the 16 acre Sandy Cove project provides employment for 20 people.

P. T. (Pat) Marti of Miscouche, a member of the Fish and Game Association, provided the idea of the Fish and Game Park.

RE-ACTIVATE TRACK

One increasingly popular attraction at Miscouche is harness racing. To provide for this, the village's raceway has been re-activated by the Miscouche Firemen's Club. Several improvements have been made for 1965 and some of these include:

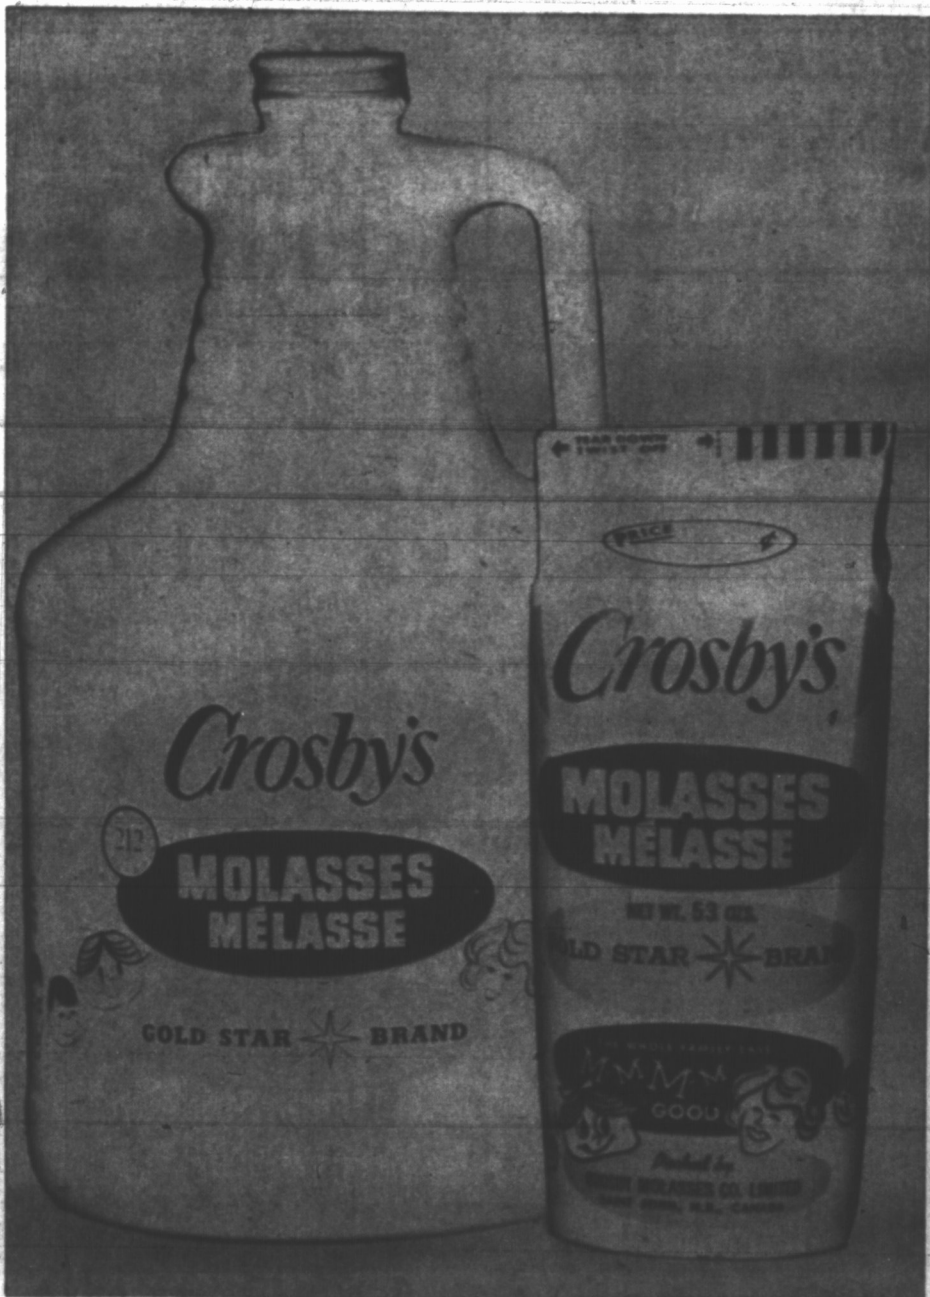

a new sound system; the installation of 20 new stables and a portable grandstand.

Perhaps Miscouche's greatest dream has yet to be realized. A community centre is desired by residents and so far government officials have been contacted, information prices and plans obtained and several visits have been visited.

Other projects re-activated in Miscouche include: renovation to the fire hall to accommodate a new fire truck costing $10,000; water and sewerage system installed in fire hall; repairs to the pump house; renovations to the parish hall for Boy Scouts; starting of a street lighting program and new homes being built.

In addition the Miscouche Fire Department has acquired portable pumps and Scott Packs (compressed air tanks).

Assistance from various government branches made these projects possible.

Canadian selected director

LONDON (CP)—Alvin Rakoff, 38-year-old BBC television producer from Toronto, has been chosen by the Bristol Old Vic Theatre to direct its production of Hamlet in March.

"I think I'm the first Canadian to direct Shakespeare in England," says Rakoff, who hasn't directed a stage play since his university days but remarks airily he believes in "starting at the top."

The Bristol Old Vic, country cousin of the famed London playhouse which now is called the National Theatre, has a fine reputation for classic productions and also as a seedbed for promising new playwrights.

Rakoff thinks his Canadian birth and TV background will be an advantage in helping dispel any preconceived ideas about matching someone else's Hamlet.

"I aim to be respectful but not reverential about Willie."

Rakoff came to London from Toronto in 1952 after a spell with CBC television and four years as a newspaper man, during which time he worked for The Globe and Mail. His stay in Britain was intended to be a three-month vacation, but stretched to years when he made his mark with BBC television as a drama producer.

He directed the first three plays on the publicly-owned corporation's second TV channel, opened last spring, and also produced Terence Rattigan's specially-written TV play, Heart to Heart.

Rakoff is married to English actress Jacqueline Hill.
