No Charges Are Laid Against St. F.X. Assoc.

FREDERICTON (CP) — No charges have been laid against any members of the St. Francis Xavier University Alumni Association as a result of an RCMP raid on the Vita Bay Club in Bathurst Oct. 29.
The raid was on the club and not the alumni, said Supt. H. A. Maxted, commanding the RCMP's J division.
Members of the RCMP had waited until the dinner was over before conducting the raid.
However, he said the RCMP have laid charges against club owner Thomas Burgalia for unlawfully keeping liquor for sale Oct. 28 and Oct. 29, dates of the alumni meeting.
Charges of unlawfully selling liquor also have been laid against Omer Roy, the Vita Bay Club's bartender.
Both men will appear in Bathurst court today. A. P. Tracy-Gould, Newcastle, will represent the crown.

NO HARM MEANT
Supt. Maxted said there had been no intention to embarrass members of the alumni, but some of them were seen at the club at the time of the raid.
New Brunswick's liquor commissioner, C. L. Dougherty, of Fredericton, said he had given written permission to the alumni allowing refreshments to be served.
A raiding party of 14 RCMP officers was involved, said Supt.

Maxted, simply because the size of the bar, the numbers of exit and entrances to the club and its grounds made such a number the most efficient group to do the job quickly.
He said the names of those found in the club, and their photographs were taken. This was routine policy.
Attorney-General R.G.L. Fairweather is in Toronto. He will not return to the province until Thursday and was unavailable for comment.
Supt. Maxted said the raid had been thoroughly investigated.

ACTION PROTESTED
Letter from Bathurst solicitor John J. Hogan to Justice Minister Fulton, the provincial attorney-general and Premier Flemming allegedly claim RCMP "usurped an authority which was not theirs by law, creating a disturbance, insulted leading citizens and clergymen of both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and behaved generally in a manner unbecoming members of the RCMP."
Mr. Hogan, a member of the alumni and solicitor for club owner Burgalia, is reported also to have sent letters to Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Health Minister Dr. J. F. McInerney.
Premier Flemming was quoted as having replied saying he felt sure "a proper probe into the circumstances will be carried out by Mr. Fairweather."

Opening lead—jack of spades.
One of the traits that distinguishes a good player from an average one is that he doesn't give up when he appears to be licked.
This philosophy applies as much to a defender as it does to a declarer. The idea always is to try to beat your opponent, even when the outlook is gloomy and unpromising.
Observe this case where West led a spade, South taking the king. Declarer led a diamond and West won with the king.
The fate of the hand rested on West's next play. There was only one card in his hand he could lead to defeat the contract.
West led the ten of hearts and declarer's guess was cooked. If the defenders would eventually win three hearts and two diamonds for a one trick set.
If dummy played the jack in-suc-dad, East's king would win.

and a heart return would again establish the setting trick.
And if dummy played the three on the ten of hearts lead, East would signal with the six and then play his king on the heart continuation. In all three cases south would wind up down one, losing three hearts and the A-K of diamonds.
West's defense is based on practical considerations. He cannot sit idly by and make the "safe" return of the ten of spades at trick three. To do so would be a concession of defeat, what with dummy's long diamond suit in plain view.
West must attack. He must probe for declarer's weakness. That weakness cannot lie in clubs, since South is bound to have club strength for his opening bid.
The only hope is that South lacks the king of hearts. Hearts are therefore attacked. But the choice of which heart to lead is crucial. A low heart would be ducked in dummy and South would make the contract. The lead of the queen would likewise be unsuccessful. Declarer would take the ace and still have a heart stopper.
Only the lead of the ten prevents South from making the hand.

HOWLAN
Calvin Carruthers went to Halifax on Thursday, Oct. 29 where he expects employment.
Our dear old friend and neighbour Mrs. J. B. Arsenault again entered the Western hospital on Thursday Oct. 29 for care and treatment.
Bruce Carruthers Sr., is spending a few days at the home of his son Bruce Carruthers Jr., at his new home at Casumpeac assisting with the fall plowing.
Mrs. Robert Arsenault and son Mark spent Friday at Milton, P.E.I.
The community of Howlan was saddened on Friday, Oct. 30 when the angel of death visited the district and claimed for its own the soul of Mrs. James Arsenault, mother of Mrs. A. D. Arsenault after a long illness. The late Mrs. Arsenault was a former resident of Fortune Cove but for the past few years lived with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Arsenault who tenderly cared for her assisted by another daughter Mrs. Mellie Alexander of U.S.A. who came over a couple of months ago to help care for her dear mother. Her funeral service burial was held at St. Anthony's RC Church of which she was always such a devoted and faithful member on Monday, Nov. 2.
J. B. Arsenault spent Friday, Oct. 30 in Summerside.
Boy Scouts from O'Leary canvassed this district on Saturday "Hallowe'en" with their sale of Apples and were well patronized.
Motoring from Summerside on Saturday night were Paul Gallant, Eric Gaudette and Albina Thibedeau. Mr. and Mrs. Rae Noonan and family of O'Leary were to Howlan on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Teotis Peters.
Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Carruthers and family went to Casumpeac on Sunday, Nov. 1 to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Carruthers Jr. who moved in to their newly purchased home on Saturday.
Leo Gallant of Bloomfield Corner, was to Howlan on Sunday afternoon.
Frank O'Meara of Bloomfield was to Howlan on Sunday, Nov. 1.
Hallowe'en passed on very quietly in this district on Saturday with the usual young fry out for a trick or treat. Treats must have been plenty as no bad tricks were played.
A large crowd attended the funeral on Monday morning at St. Anthony's of the late Mrs. James Arsenault who died at Howlan on Friday, Nov. 1.
Earnest Gallant has now gone to O'Leary High School.
