ling trout or where trout may be had if they are in the right mood. I find it increasingly hard to understand the attitude of many anglers when it comes to trout hole or mill pond where trout are abundant. Angling pressure has reached a point that unless a fisherman has control, or partial control, of a trout stream or pond his chances of getting a decent catch are practically nil. This situation holds mainly in respect to fresh water trout fishing and also applies to a lesser extent to some salt water areas.

I will relate briefly my own experience in respect to trout fishing pressure. Seven or eight years ago the beaver built a large dam not far from the old homestead property. It was in a dense spruce swamp and I stumbled upon it during one of my rambles. The second year after it was built I used the trout. There were plenty from six to nine inches in length. They kept gaining approximately a quarter pound in weight with each passing year until they reached between one pound and one and a quarter pounds in weight. It was nothing unusual to take a catch that averaged a pound each. After they reached the 1 1/4 pound stage they remained practically stationary. The pond was getting over stocked. I had never fished it heavily, being content with maybe 40 or 50 trout a year. I seldom made over four or five trips to the tam in a year and those were made in May and June. When the hot weather set in algae formed on the surface of the water and the trout became soft in texture and indifferent to either bait or fly.

When the fishing reached this stage I began to invite my friends in for some sport... and they did have sport while it lasted. When the general public became aware of this trout fishing Mecca the situation changed in short order. An army of fishermen flocked in from all points of the compass. They would be there at daybreak on Sunday morning and at dark on Sunday night and the sky was the limit in respect to the number caught.

Rubber dingies were carried in through the woods and launched. Trees were cut down and a causeway built out to the beaver house which was used as a fishing point (and what they didn't do to the beaver house). They tramped across the dam so much they opened up a gap 12 feet wide and two feet deep and lowered the water level accordingly. The beaver left when they destroyed their house and this dam is now practically out. The dam and fishing site were practically wrecked in two weeks. It looked as if a regiment of Storm Troopers had billeted in the area.

The last straw came when two of my friends who went out to try their luck found the boat I kept at the dam moored out in the deepest part of the dam where it was impossible to wade out to it without being in water up to the chin. Some people have their own ideas as to what constitutes a joke. From then on the clammers were put on solid. Anyone who hunts or fishes on that property now without permission do so at their own risk... it's now Enclosed Property under The Game Act. At that it was a case of locking the stable after the horse was stolen.

As I mentioned at the beginning it's hard to understand the capers of some people... not all, thank goodness. No one wishes to deprive anyone of healthful sport and recreation but when it comes to the point where one has either to institute restrictions or forego one's own sport there isn't much choice on which course to adopt.

Sport Echoes From Prince County

Jupe Pluvius is getting to be an awful bore. The way he hangs around when there are ball games to be played. He's rained out three successive Island League ball game dates, more postponements than we had all last summer.

Somebody asked us recently why a batter is out without the catcher catching the ball when first base is occupied. The rule actually protects the boys who are at bat. If this rule were not in the books, a clever catcher could drop a third strike, throw to second to force the man going down and then the ball could be thrown to first for a double play. The rule makes this double play impossible.

Local umpires sometimes forget that with runners on first and second, and less than two out, when a batter pops a fly to the infield, the arbiter should declare an "infield fly" immediately. It is not enough to recognize it as such. It should be declared immediately.

The Curran and Briggs American imports are busily engaged when not playing ball, in teaching the fine points of baseball. We've seen Bob St. Pierre and Bob Timmins up at the High School diamond putting the kids through their paces, and we presume Johnny Finn also takes his turn. This coaching should help the local boys a lot.

While the western section of the Prince County Baseball League seems to have gotten away to a good start, the Eastern Section is fast getting nowhere. There are only two teams, Kinkora and Kensington, and all efforts to include a third seem always to end in failure. Summerside was going to enter a team composed of boys who were not quite good enough for Curran and Briggs but the plan seems to have fallen through. We were talking to Irv Jay of Kensington, and he seemed quite disappointed that the Summerside team hadn't materialized.

Glad to see the Y's Men getting their bathing house and other bathing facilities ready for the youth of Summerside again this year. Competitive aquatic sports is generally limited to one gala day, but what a wonderful time the young people have all summer. It is a dressed up version of "The Ole Swimm'n' Hole" dear to the hearts of children everywhere.

Island Horses Entered At Truro

TRURO, N. S., June 29—(CP)—Thirty-seven Maritimes horses are entered for eight separate dashes in a night holiday racing card scheduled for here Saturday. The list features four well known horses from Prince Edward Island—Miss Knox, Quick Lick, Bob Canuck and Mary's Delight.

Local Golfers Going To Moncton For N.B.-P.E.I. Open

Some ten or twelve golfers from the Charlottetown Golf Club will leave for Moncton, N. B. over Saturday and Sunday where they will take part in the New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island Amateur, Open and Junior golf championships to be held there on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

The group who will make the trip include nine senior members and two juniors, at the moment, but it is expected that a number of others will also make the trip. The senior members include Maurice Dowling, Doug Saunders, Don MacDonald, W. A. Beer, Frank McInnis, A. G. MacMillan, R. T. Holman, Tom Rogers and B. M. Sears. The two juniors are Buddy Clarke and Bobby White.

Junior Baseball Game Sunday

The big baseball feature over Memorial Field on Sunday afternoon will be a City Junior Baseball League clash between the Kinsmen and the Knights of Columbus squads, which will get underway there at 2.30.

The City junior game between Knights and Victorias, scheduled for today, has been postponed due to the fact that Memorial Field is being prepared for Saturday's invitation track and field meet.

after a shaky first inning to keep the Tigers from increasing their 4-1-2 game American League lead. The Tigers roughed up Cain for two runs and four hits in that initial inning, but could do little against him the rest of the way.

The White Sox got 14 hits off loser Freddie Hutchinson and relief pitcher Saul Rogovin. It was Cain's fourth victory against five losses. It was the fifth loss for Hutchinson, who has won eight.

At New York catcher Al Evans led the battering Senators with four hits and Irv Noren pumped a three-run homer at Washington scored six runs in the fourth inning.

The loss was second-place New York's seventh in the last nine games and cost them their third successive series. Pitcher Joe Ostrowski was kayoed in the second and Tom Ferrick became the loser when he was unable to get a man out in the fourth.

Evans Leads Attack

At Brooklyn, the Giants snapped to life in the last two innings, scoring seven runs. Ralph Branca, who had pitched three hitless innings of relief ball for the Dodgers entered the eighth with a 5-4 lead when he suddenly lost his stuff. He walked Don Mueller and granted a single to Montie Irvin before Dan Bankhead was thrown into the breach. Bankhead got off to a brilliant start by inducing pinch-hitter Roy Weatherly to bounce into a double play. He got two strikes on Bob Thomson before grooving a pitch that Thomson laced to left for a run-scoring double that tied the score at 5-5.

A walk to Al Dark and a single by Hank Thompson finished Bankhead, who took the loss. Erv Pava took over and yielded two more hits before he ended the four-run inning. The Giants slammed Al Epperly for three insurance runs in the eighth.

Dave Koslo started and received credit for his eighth victory.

BRESCIA, Italy, June 29—(AP)—Mrs. Fanny Blankers-Koen of the Netherlands today bettered the women's world record for the 200-yard run, scoring in 24.2 seconds. The recognized record is held by Poland's Stella Walasiewicz with 24.3 seconds, set in 1935.
