

Speculate Quarrel Over Party Led To Slaying

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Did Lana Turner's refusal to appear with John Stompanato at Hollywood's fanciest party of the year—the Academy Awards—trigger the final stage that led the actress' young daughter to fatally stab the underworld figure?

Close movieland friends give yes and no answers to that question Sunday. Lana, 33, up for her first Academy Award nomination in 20 years of movie stardom, was escorted to the March 28 show by Glenn Rose, her publicity man and a close friend.

Rose said the Oscar event had nothing to do with the arguments.

"Lana tried to shake John long before this but was scared of him," said Rose.

But other friends close to the actress said Stompanato, 32, who loved the spotlight, didn't want to slay home on this, one of the biggest nights in Lana's career.

"I'll get you where it hurts the most—your daughter and your mother," Lana also told the Beverly Hills police that Stompanato had choked her into insensibility during an argument in her London hotel room last year. Afterwards Scotland Yard "invited" Stompanato to leave Britain.

The final argument came Friday night when Stompanato dropped in the actress' Beverly Hills mansion about 9 p.m.

As the fight tempo increased Cheryl took her mother in the bathroom and, as quoted by the police said: "I asked mother why she just didn't tell John to leave."

"She said, 'You don't understand—I'm deathly afraid of him.'"

The police said Cheryl became fearful of her mother's safety and went to the kitchen and grabbed the first big knife she could find. It had an eight-inch blade.

"I just walked between them and did it," police quoted the youngster.

VISITS DAUGHTER
Lana still fighting sleep, got some rest during the weekend after a doctor gave her heavy sedation. She visited her daughter at Juvenile Hall and friends said she seemed reassured that the child was being given good care.

Cheryl, daughter of Stephen Crane, second of Lana's four husbands, will remain in Juvenile Hall pending a hearing Tuesday to determine whether there is sufficient cause to prosecute her for the slaying.

She could be made a ward of the court and placed under its jurisdiction until she became of age. Or, if put on trial and found guilty of murder, she could be sentenced to life imprisonment. Minors can not be executed under California law.

"This was justifiable homicide," lawyer Jerry Giesler said after conferring with the girl.

BECAME ENRAGED
"When she refused him," said one friend, "he became enraged and started the violent arguments that finally caused poor little Cheryl to stab him to protect her mother."

Beverly Hills Police Chief Clinton Anderson quoted the actress as saying that Stompanato had a violent quarrel with her March 30, just four days after the awards. Another one followed the next night.

This was the day that 14-year-old Cheryl Crane came home from her boarding school to spend the Easter vacation with her mother. The police report said Cheryl overheard part of the argument and learned for the first time of her mother's difficulties with Stompanato.

"On this occasion John said he would cut my face with a razor," the police account of Lana's statement related. "He told me: 'If a man makes a living with his hands, I would destroy his hands. You make your living with your face. I will destroy your face.'"

Home And Combined Home And Store Destroyed By Fire

Cardigan Parish Priest Is Author Of Learned Work

REV. FR. O'HANLEY

The announcement has been made of the recent publication by the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Bathurst, N.B. of a new commentary in the field of medical ethics by Reverend Edgar Godin of the Hospital staff and Rev. J.P.E. O'Hanley, Pastor of All Saints' Parish, Cardigan, P.E.I.

The new work, "Hospital Ethics," was written by Fathers Godin and O'Hanley while the latter was visiting Professor of Philosophy at St. Thomas' College in Chatham last year. It was intended as a response to a need frequently expressed by medical practitioners and nurses for a commentary on the moral code of Catholic hospitals addressed to the problems which they encounter in the everyday practice of their profession.

Already it has received wide acclaim as the "Most practical, most comprehensive, and most concise work yet to appear in the English language in the field of medical morals," and it promises to become a standard textbook on the subject for medical students and student nurses, as well as a standard reference for those studying in allied fields and all engaged in the medical, surgical and religious care of the sick.

The book is also being welcomed by non-Catholic doctors and nurses as a guide in understanding the rules of hospitals, replacing as it does more technical and involved texts on medical ethics.

TO ROME

Rev. J.P.E. O'Hanley, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Hanley, St. Peter's, P.E.I., is an honor graduate of St. Dunstan's University, Toronto and was ordained at St. Peter's Bay on May 1, 1932. Following pastoral work in Summerside and Charlottetown, after his ordination, he was selected by ecclesiastical authorities to study for a doctorate in Philosophy at the Angelicum in Rome where he obtained his Ph. D. in 1937. He then returned to P.E.I. and was assigned to St. Dunstan's as Professor of Latin and Philosophy, where he remained until 1951.

During his time at St. Dunstan's, Father O'Hanley was credited with having made a major contribution to the development of the students in the social as well as in the intellectual order. He was Faculty Advisor to many student organizations, and under his influence a complete re-organization of student activities on the campus took place during the late Forties.

In addition to his contribution to student life at St. Dunstan's one of his works during those years had a major impact on students throughout this Continent. This was his translation into English of the three-volume Cursum Philosophiae of Dr. Henri Gouhier. This work, like the present Hospital Ethics, was widely acclaimed on publication, and is in use as a text book in many of the major colleges and universities in North America.

Father O'Hanley resigned from the Faculty at St. Dunstan's in 1951 and joined the R.C.A.F. for a tour of duty as Chaplain. In 1953 he completed his duties in the Air Force, and was appointed Pastor at historic All Saints Parish, Cardigan, P.E.I., a position he now holds.

The congratulations of his fellow-citizens from all walks of life are being extended to Father O'Hanley as he joins the host of Islanders who have made a significant contribution to the betterment of their fellow-man.

Stainless Steel

CONTAINING INCO NICKEL

puts a lasting smile on the face of a building

Now under construction, the modern office building of Atlas Steels Limited in Welland, Ontario, will have a bright, shiny stainless steel exterior. The stainless steel used in the curtain walls of this building contains Inco Nickel.

Everyone knows that in time, the face of a city can get pretty grimy. Now it needn't . . . ever. That's the beauty of this modern method of building . . . stainless steel curtain wall construction. The bright, smooth surface on the outer wall of a building washes clean with every rainfall. Upkeep expense is negligible.

Curtain wall construction costs less in the long run. The walls go up in panels quickly and easily. They reflect sunlight. They won't crack or buckle. Stainless steel curtain walls are less than half as thick as masonry walls, allowing more useable space. The walls weigh less, too. Builders can use lighter—and less costly—steel columns.

That's the economy of stainless steel curtain wall construction. It explains why a number of new buildings will have these bright, shiny, rust-resistant stainless steel outer walls. And Inco supplies nickel to the Canadian steel company that produces stainless steel.

Nickel helps give stainless steel its rich, silvery lustre and its exceptional strength . . . makes it easy to fabricate. Small wonder that fine tableware, modern sinks and so many other beautiful and practical items for the home are now made with nickel-containing stainless steel. Another example of the way Inco metals serve the Canadian industries that serve you.

Inco has recently published a colourful and beautifully illustrated 32-page booklet about Canada's important nickel industry, entitled "The Exciting Story of Nickel". It is written primarily for Canadian youth by Alan King, but adults will also find it full of interesting information. Just write to Inco for a free copy of this booklet.
