TUNE—"Sweet Bells of Shandon."

In all the long story of earth and its glory, There's nothing engages the love of my heart Like the glorious flower from the Heavenly bower...

How to Build up a Town.

The following timely items, regarding the way to build up a town, were found running around without an owner, and, concluding that the articles' sweetness would not be wasted on the desert air...

Be courteous to strangers that come among us, so that they go away with good impressions. Always cheer up the men who go in for improvements.

Don't kick about any necessary public improvements because it is not at your own door, or for fear that your taxes may be raised 15 cents.

If you are a business man, don't advertise merely to "help the printers along," advertise to help your business and the town along.

If labor enriched employers in proportion to its cheapness, we would wage as violent a war against employers as was ever conceived in the mad brain of a communist.

Advice for a Matrimonially Inclined Man. Select the girl. Agree with the girl's father in politics and the mother in religion.

Don't swear to the girl that you have no bad habits. It will be enough to say that you never heard yourself snore in your sleep.

Don't pat too much sweet stuff on paper. If you do, you will hear it read in after years.

If, while wearing your new summer trousers for the first time, you sit down on some molasses candy that little Willie has left on the chair, smile sweetly and remark that you don't mind sitting on molasses candy at all, and that "boys will be boys."

Don't lie about your financial condition. It is very annoying to a bride who has pictured for herself a life of luxury in her ancestral halls.

Don't be too soft. Don't say "These little hands shall never do a stroke of work when they are mine," and "You shall have nothing to do in our home but to sing all day long and chirp to the sparrows."
