

Bootleg Sausage Meat Discovered Part Horse

NEW YORK (AP)—Laboratory tests showed here 30 tons of bootleg sausage meat seized in a packing plant here is part beef, part horse, and part something else—but not kangaroo. Authorities said the adulterated meat, passed off on a reputable packer by a broker under investigation as a loan shark, probably came from a mob-operated plant which might be shipping it all over the country.

Kansas, Ohio, Pittsburgh and Boston have asked for details.

York, although in some places in the world it is judged better than beef. Kangaroo is generally considered a delicacy, and Kangaroo tail soup is on the menu of first-class restaurants. The 30 tons of meat was seized Thursday at Merkel Inc., one of the city's biggest wholesalers. The boxes carried counterfeit U.S. department of agriculture inspection stamps, and phoney labels of a Kansas slaughterhouse.

Nathan Lobnitz, president of Merkel, said the company was fooled by the agriculture department seals, and "had absolutely no way of telling that anything could be wrong with it."

The meat was sold to Merkel by a broker whom the police refused to identify, saying he is a loan shark and under investigation.

A loan shark and under investigation leads money at exorbitant interest and very often collects it by terror—a field now under close scrutiny in New York.

Lobnitz, who waived immunity from prosecution, testified for two hours Friday before a grand jury.

Little white labels on the adulterated meat bore the name of Hoptains dressed Beef Inc., Dodge City, Kan., but an official of that firm said it doesn't use such a label.
