

YORK UNITED CHURCH

United Church Re-Opening Sun.

Sunday, Sept. 12 marks the re-opening and re-dedication of York United Church. Guest speaker at both afternoon and evening services will be Rev. Donald Boothroyd, minister of Wesley Memorial United Church, Moncton.

Rev. David Barwise, chairman of P.E.I. Presbytery, will be present in the afternoon.

The choir will be assisted by soloists David Hall and Helen Wilson. In the evening special numbers will be rendered by the Park Royal Male Eight. A recital of piano and organ music will be given prior to each service by the regular organist, Beryl Vessey, assisted by Arthur Vesey at the piano.

While accurate historical records previous to 1819 are not readily available, it is reputed that occasional services of worship were held in the homes in the community of Little York as far back as 1801 under the guidance of a travelling Methodist preacher named Thomas Dawson.

rooms for Christian Education purposes, an entry porch and lowered tower. A semi-basement was excavated to house a modern at that time furnace, and a new chimney was built at the east to replace the one removed from the west end of the building. New pews, doors, windows, were also provided.

BASEMENT SPACE

In general, the members of York United Church have always been aware of the necessity of Christian education. It is because of this awareness that, on noticing the increased interest and attendance of the young people following the introduction of the New Curriculum studies, the congregation decided to build and equip a Christian Education centre.

They have now realized this by raising the church building, excavating the entire basement area—giving space for four additional class rooms—And an assembly hall. Two stairways have been built, one from the south-west vestry, and one from the east entrance. The furnace room is equipped with a modern forced-air furnace to ensure adequate heating for all areas.

Many residents and former residents of York have given evidence of their approval and appreciation by donating generously to the church building fund and also in the purchasing of memorial gifts and furnishings. These gifts will be acknowledged and dedicated this Sunday.

A public address system has been set up which will enable the expected overflow attendance to hear and participate in the special services.

Islander Enrollment Increases At N.S. AC

Enrollment this year of Island students in the two-year diploma course at the Nova Scotia Agricultural College, Truro, has greatly increased over that of previous years.

At least eight students will take the course, beginning this fall, Agriculture Minister Andrew MacRae said last year only two Island students began the course and the year before, only one started.

Mr. MacRae attributed the increase to the efforts of the provincial advisory committee on education which, he said, is making more people aware of the facilities available for agricultural education. He also pointed out that bursaries of $150 are available for students and the provincial department of education makes annual loans of $200 available to agricultural college students. Mr. MacRae added that under a federal-provincial program there is a dollar-per-day allowance paid to students.

Mr. MacRae said he hoped more agricultural students would take advantage of the facilities in Truro and pointed out that applications for this year's courses close Sept. 30.
